

COALITION MAY RULE NEXT CONGRESS

G. O. P. CHIEFS CAST ANXIOUS EYES ON POLLS

President and Friends Hear Returns at White House This Evening

Washington—(AP)—The home radio and telephone will bring election results to President Hoover and a majority of his cabinet, though some will be found all through election day and election night on the Republican fighting front.

With a number of intimate friends the president expects to receive returns in the White House until his usual retiring hour—10:30. For the full story of the ballots—whether the seventy-second congress will be dominated by Democratic opposition—he will wait until next day.

Two years ago, at Palo Alto, Calif., he retained early also, but only after assuring himself of his own victory and determining the proportions of the landslide that placed in office with him a staunchly Republican congress. A group of blackboards set up in the living room of the Hoover home, told the story then as it came hot from the wires of press associations. The three hours difference in time between the Atlantic seaboard and California gave him complete enough results from the populous east soon after sundown.

The cabinet members, campaigners almost all, each with a special election interest as well as the general hope for administrative majorities, will be among the most eager watchers of results. Like Vice President Curtis, virtually all of these leaders of administrative affairs have made forays out into local political fields or have talked over national radio hook-ups from Washington.

DAVIS MOST ACTIVE
Tonight, those in Washington will keep one ear attuned to the radio announcer's tale, the other to the telephone bringing news from the Republican national committee headquarters.

The most active cabinet member, of course, is James J. Davis, the secretary of labor, himself a candidate. Already in Pittsburgh, conducting the finale of his own campaign for the senatorship from Pennsylvania, Secretary Davis was to be joined today by Mrs. Davis, who has lost no opportunities to aid her husband. Pittsburgh drew also Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, who intended casting his vote at the home precinct.

Traveling farthest to perform his citizen's ballot-casting duty, the secretary of war, Patrick J. Hurley, hurried out to Tulsa, Okla.

That indefatigable campaigner, Vice President Curtis, finished his round of oratory in his home town of Topeka, Kas., and after voting planned to dash back to Washington for the avalanche of returns.

The post master general, Walter F. Brown, who has been in the midst of Ohio politics in his home town of Toledo, also planned an election-day return to Washington to watch results.

Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, who recently returned from his Missouri home, said today he would be most concerned about results in his state. But the secretary of interior, Ray Lyman Wilbur of California, said he was most interested in Ohio, Oklahoma and Delaware.

Three cabinet members, watching their home states, will take a special interest in the fate of a woman at the polls. Robert P. Lament of Chicago, the secretary of commerce, made his final pre-election statement urging support of Ruth Hanna McCormick as senator. Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, speaking for New York Republican candidates, singled out for praise Ruth Baker Pratt, Republican nominee for the senate from his home district. The secretary of the navy, Charles Francis Adams, looked toward the results in his home state, Massachusetts, where the Republican representative, Edith Nourse Rogers, is running for reelection.

Attorney General William D. Mitchell, whose duties have kept him at his own desk every day since the summer vacation and who made no campaign speeches, was the one member of the cabinet whose interest in the returns was purely a general one.

POSTAL LEASE PROBERS OPEN HEARING NOV. 12

Washington—(AP)—Senator Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin, chairman of the senate postoffice lease investigation committee, announced today his committee will begin hearings at Chicago on Nov. 12.

From Chicago the committee will go to St. Paul to open hearings on Nov. 17 which will continue for a week. Charges of fraud and corruption have been made in connection with the lease to the government of a commercial postoffice building in St. Paul.

Blaine said witnesses had been subpoenaed for the hearings but their names would not be given out in advance.

Woman Loses Left Hand In Auto Crash

Police Chief R. J. McCarty of Kaukauna Tuesday morning was investigating an automobile accident at McCarty's crossing on Highway 41, about four miles north of Kaukauna, in which Mrs. Joseph Macwkevic, 32, of 1036 Ninety-third-st., Chicago, lost her left hand at the wrist. The accident happened about 9 o'clock Monday night.

Leo Fabian, whose address could not be learned, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Orant, Chicago, were in the car with Mrs. Macwkevic. Fabian was driving the car, which was going toward Kaukauna. It had just made the curve, north of the railroad tracks, when the driver evidently lost control of the wheel and the machine crashed into a railroad wig-wag signal. The signal was torn from the ground and smashed and the car was demolished. The wreckage landed in the railroad tracks.

Passersby took the four people to St. Elizabeth hospital here but only Mrs. Macwkevic remained there. Her hand had been severed at the wrist, evidently by flying glass. The other occupants suffered only slight bruises.

Chief McCarty was called and had the wreckage removed from the railroad tracks and taken to Kaukauna. He then started an investigation. Up to noon Tuesday Chief McCarty had been unable to locate the other occupants of the car. They left the hospital without giving their names and had not arrived at Kaukauna up to noon Tuesday to make inquiries about their car. Chief McCarty said if they didn't appear Tuesday he planned to make inquiries about the group at Chicago.

TWO MEN ARRESTED FOR BANK ROBBERIES

Identified as Bandits at Monticello and Mt. Horeb
—Face Illinois Trials

Chicago—(AP)—Denied their release on habeas corpus actions, Francis Farley and Stanley Ford, both of Chicago, were held today for "isconsin authorities in connection with two bank robberies in that state. Ford's wife, Vivian, was arrested with the men.

The pair was identified by officials as the men who robbed the state banks at Monticello and Mt. Horeb, Wis., of nearly $25,000. They were also identified by Mrs. Luella Bourque and her sister, Chloanna, as the men who robbed them of $7,000 in jewels several weeks ago. Detectives say the men are responsible for several Chicago robberies and refuse to release them to Wisconsin officials until the men stand trial here. Bonds valued at $27,000 were found in Ford's room and identified by authorities as taken from Wisconsin banks. Another $20,000 worth of bonds was found on his person at the time of his arrest, police said. In one package found in his apartment, police said they discovered 10 shares of Armour company stock issued to Emma Cocker; six shares of Wisconsin Power and Light company stock issued to Eva Sayles, and 25 shares of American Telephone and Telegraph company stock issued to Will Woods.

EARLY CHICAGOANS GO TO POLLS THROUGH FOG

Chicago—(AP)—Chicago voters groped their way for 3,470 polling places in a heavy fog early today. The fog hovered over all sections of the city and retarded traffic to a snail's pace.

All was calm and orderly, however, as the first voters registered their choices. Fred V. Maguire, president of the board of election commissioners, predicted Chicago would poll between $50,000 and $60,000 votes.

Fewer Deaths From Booze In U. S.—More In Wisconsin

Washington—(AP)—Deaths from alcoholism in the United States declined last year from the total attained in 1928.

A census bureau tabulation of the total deaths attributed to that cause in the registration area—46 states, the District of Columbia and a group of nine cities in the other two states—showed 4,339 deaths against 4,827 recorded in 1928. The decrease showed up also in the rate per 100,000 population which was set at 3.7 against 4.1. The census bureau estimated this registration area holds 95 per cent of the United States' population.

Declines took place in New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, New Jersey, Maryland, Michigan and Missouri. Increases, however, were shown in Massachusetts, Wisconsin, and California. These 11 states completed the list of those reporting more than 100 such deaths.

QUIZ KIDNAP SUSPECT IN MURDER CASE

Man Held for Yocum Abduction Questioned About Raigle Slaying

Detroit—(AP)—Police today were questioning Lloyd Winslow, arrested here for the kidnaping of Earl Yocum, Galva, Ill., banker in connection with the death at Charlotte, Mich., of Clarence Raigle, Kewanee, Ill., youth.

Raigle's body was found in a par. at Charlotte late yesterday, covered with blankets in the tonneau of his automobile. He had been dead several days when the body was discovered. The first assumption of authorities was that he had been a victim of a home made exhaust heater in his car.

Detroit police, advised by Sheriff Horace Boorn, Charlotte, of Raigle's death, learned that Winslow and Raigle were friends in Kewanee. They immediately questioned Winslow and reported that he told them he would "tell everything" when Sheriff Charles Nash of Henry-co, Illinois, arrived and he learned definitely what charges had been placed against him. He would not enlarge upon that remark, police said.

LEFT LAST WEDNESDAY

Kewanee, Ill.—(AP)—Clarence Raigle, whose body was found yesterday in Charlotte, Mich., left here in his auto at 3 o'clock a. m. last Wednesday, police learned. His employers and his fiancée said he had no motive for suicide. Information received by Chief of Police John D. Krumtinger was to the effect that the exhaust pipe on Raigle's auto had been turned up, so that it discharged into the car.

FOUR ARRESTED FOR SLAYING IN HOSPITAL

Newark, N. J.—(AP)—Four men were arrested today as police pursued the slayers of Dominick Paselli, killed last night in a hospital bed where he had sought to hide from the enemies.

Two of them, police believed, might be the pair who walked quietly past the information desk of the Newark General hospital, went directly to the obscure room where Paselli was a patient, and killed him with three shots.

The four prisoners were Ralph Russo, puglist, Harold Corbett, and Ernest Fiumja, each 25 and of Newark, and Tony Bove, 39, of New York's bawdy. They were held on open charges.

Paselli, known in the underworld as "the ape," was called by police a "finger man" in holdups—the advance agent who went ahead of gunmen and spotted their prey. He also had a reputation as a small time beer runner, hijacker and "muscle man."

STORM WARNINGS IN EASTERN U. S. AREA

Washington—(AP)—The weather bureau today issued the following storm warnings:

West Bend—(AP)—An automobile thief and a friend serving a term for failure to pay alimony, who escaped by sawing the bars of the Clark-co jail at Neillsville Oct. 30, were arrested in a roadside near West Bend last night. The men are Willard Denkert and Clarence Dousener. Both are being held in jail awaiting word from Neillsville.

Confesses He Killed Wife After Tiff

Anton Jonelis Admits He Shot Mate Who Refused to Patch Up Quarrel

Fond du Lac—(AP)—Anton Jonelis, Farnell farmer wanted in connection with the slaying of his wife, 33, was in custody today because of a "hunch" of Sheriff Alfred Vandezande of Fond du Lac.

While a posse searched wooded swamps near the Jonelis farm for traces of the man, Vandezande led his deputies to a farm near here owned by a friend of Jonelis and found the man in the barn. The body of Mrs. Jonelis, mother of five children, was discovered yesterday by four of the children as they returned from school. One of the six bullets striking her had torn her wedding ring from her finger.

Vandezande said Jonelis admitted firing the shots that killed his wife. The woman recently filed suit for a divorce, alleging cruelty.

Jonelis made a written confession to the district attorney today. He said:

"My wife and I had quarreled a lot, and separated. I went to Fond du Lac and got a gun. I wasn't going to let anybody else have her if I couldn't, and I thought that if she wouldn't make up with me, I would shoot her. I went to her about 10 o'clock Monday morning and tried to make up with her and kiss her. She wouldn't let me kiss her, so I shot her."

ACCUSED EMBEZZLER HELD IN BOSTON JAIL

Boston—(AP)—Henry C. Wiley, 62, who was arrested yesterday charged with taking $30,000 from estates and charitable institutions of which he was trustee, was remanded to jail in default of $100,000 bail on his arraignment today. At the same time police said Wiley admitted the theft of an additional $115,000.

Wiley's arrest yesterday resulted from questioning by Donald M. Hill, a son of William Hill, of whose estate Wiley was trustee and in whose stock brokerage business he had gained a start as an office boy.

Hill was assisted by Jay R. Benton, former attorney general and attorney for the Hill estate and others. Benton said further charges would be preferred against Wiley as soon as audits of books of various estates could be completed.

REDS DRIVEN OUT OF MILWAUKEE MEETING

Milwaukee—(AP)—Milwaukee Communist leaders who sought the support of the city council to obtain a $25,000 fund for unemployment relief will make their plea from outside the council chambers if they have anything to say today.

Entering the chamber, yesterday Donald Burke, spokesman for the leaders, shouted:

"We demand to be heard! We have a right to be heard!"

"Take him out," ordered Alderman Cornelius Corcoran, council president. "The letter sent by the Communists asking aid will be handled through regular channels."

SEEK WEALTHY WOMAN MISSING OVER DAY

Blue Hill, Maine—(AP)—Nearly 250 persons and an airplane were enlisted today in searching for Miss Alice R. Davidson, 51, member of a wealthy Pittsburgh family, who had been absent from the Davidson home on Parker's point since noon yesterday.

She went out for her customary daily walk and between 1 o'clock and 1:30 p. m. was seen on Blue Hill Falls bridge, a mile and a half from the Davidson property. On the bridge was found a button from her coat. Miss Davidson had been suffering from a nervous disorder. Her mother, Mrs. N. J. Davidson, a sister and retinue of servants were spending the vacation months with her and all were to leave for Pittsburgh Friday.

Bruening Asks Germans To Back Reform Planks

Berlin—(AP)—Admitting that the budget measure for the next fiscal year is drastic and will entail hardships, Chancellor Bruening went before the Reichstag today to plead for the economic reforms which his government has made the principal object of its career.

The chancellor admonished his hearers, and through them the German people, that "all liberty involves sacrifice." He asserted that Germany's foreign policy and her life imperatively demand early passage of the economic program.

He reminded the Reichstag of the critical situation which prevailed in Germany for the first 14 days after the general election, when victory of the radical elements led to considerable popular excitement, and he concluded that "a certain amount of weariness and resignation must disappear from Germany's economic life and from her citizens."

APPEALS FOR HELP FLOW TO RELIEF CLUBS

Demand for Assistance Already Exceeds Families Helped Last Year

Appeals for help to charitable organizations already total almost as many families as were helped by these organizations last year and winter still is several weeks away. It was revealed this morning as sponsors of the Home Aid campaign were hurrying preparations to start the public drive next Monday.

The five cooperating, charity organizations, which include the Salvation army, are receiving these appeals pending the arrival of the social worker under whose supervision the work will be carried on. This social worker, paid for by funds entirely outside of the money obtained in the Home Aid campaign, will assist in determining the need for help and the kind of help that should be given, leaving the actual work of mitigation to the societies. The social worker also will begin immediately to see what can be done to help the families help themselves. Some of the families require help because of illness and the social worker will try to secure the special help necessary to restore health and thus enable these families to be self-supporting when they no longer have the burden of special care and expense upon their backs.

Members of the cooperating charities are eager to have the expert service of a trained social worker because it will tend to make their work much more efficient and they are hopeful that the effort at rehabilitation eventually will restore families to a self-supporting basis, which is the object of all charitable work.

But the money that is contributed in the Home Aid drive will be used for immediate relief of suffering and distress and none of it goes for the work of supervision or rehabilitation. Every cent of the money subscribed will go to the cooperating charities according to the number of families they are assisting. The Salvation army will participate to the extent of its budget which is $5,000.

The total sum sought is $25,000 and it is believed this money will be subscribed without a great deal of effort because of the general realization that a real emergency faces the people of Appleton.

BRITISH MINISTRY FACES TEST TODAY

House of Commons Votes Tonight on Censure of Em- ployment Measure

London—(AP)—Parliamentary elements dissatisfied with the government's efforts to ally critical unemployment conditions threatened today to turn out the ministry of J. Ramsay MacDonald and force a general election.

Sir Herbert Samuel of the Liberal party general staff, announced that the parliamentary Liberal party which holds the commons balance of power could not oppose the government's policy.

In other quarters it was said that the Liberals generally were abstaining from voting altogether, and would not vote with the government, while a few of their membership probably even would vote with the Conservatives. Such action would make the voting nearly even and possibly dependent upon the left wing Laborites, who were expected to vote with the government, or abstain, rather than force the issue with Mr. MacDonald and his less radical ministry at this point.

Expect Phil To Be Victor In Landslide

Hammersley Says He Has "Outside Chance" to Win Governorship

Milwaukee—(AP)—Good weather proved a stimulus to rural voters today, but failed to arouse the electorate in the larger Wisconsin cities. In the country, the vote at noon was reported fairly heavy. Most cities said balloting was only one-third to one-half as large as it had been in the September primary election.

Virtually every daily newspaper in the state conceded the election of Philip F. LaFollette, Republican nominee for governor. Among those anticipating a LaFollette victory were papers which had bitterly opposed him in the primary.

Contesting with LaFollette was Charles E. Hammersley, nominee of Democrats. Hammersley held to an "outside chance" of election. Wisconsin, however, has not chosen a Democrat as governor in more than 30 years.

Milwaukee—(AP)—A traditional LaFollette landslide was forecast by Progressive Republican leaders as their nominee for governor, Phil LaFollette, opposed Charles E. Hammersley, Democrat, and Frank B. Metcalfe, Socialist, at Wisconsin polls today.

LaFollette, who won the nomination from the Conservative Republican governor, Walter J. Kohler, presented voters with the opportunity of demonstrating either the truth or falsity of the statement that Wisconsin never defeats a LaFollette. Should he be elected, Governor LaFollette will have one brother as governor, and another, Robert M. Jr., as United States senator.

Party leaders predicted a marked decline in the vote from the 600,000 total in the primary. The absence of any heated contest for office and the belief that many conservatives might regard their votes as futile attempts to defeat LaFollette were given by leaders as the basis of their forecast for a light vote.

The congressional race was complicated by LaFollette's endorsement of two Socialists for office from the Milwaukee district. Three of 11 Republicans running in the state were unopposed, while two others contested with Democrats.

While the recognition given the Socialist candidates, William F. Quick and James Sheehan, was received with surprise in some circles, Socialist headquarters issued the following statement:

"Socialists are supposed to vote for Mr. Metcalfe for governor. Philip LaFollette has entered into no deal with us. Of his own volition, he is supporting some of the Socialist candidates, but we are urging the Socialists to vote their straight ticket."

Hammersley said he believed he had "an outside chance to win."

"The people are tired of high taxes and Republican prosperity," he said, "and on that belief, I think the Democrats have a chance to put candidates in office."

Metcalfe said the Socialists would attempt to get out their entire vote to demonstrate their strength and to cut down the apparent LaFollette majority.

Based on precedent, party leaders said LaFollette would win by at least 100,000 votes.

REPORT BIG INCREASE IN U. S. GRAIN EXPORTS

Washington—(AP)—Grain exports from the United States in the week ending November 1, totaled 1,751,000 bushels as compared with 733,000 bushels in the preceding week, and 2,353,000 bushels in the corresponding week of 1929.

Wheat exports reported to the commerce department were $59,000 bushels during the week ending November 1, against 66,000 in the preceding week; barley 294,000 against 65,000; corn 21,000 against 50,000; oats 1,000 against 2,000; no exports were reported.

Canadian Grains in transit cleared from United States Atlantic ports during the week ending November 1, totaled 1,341,000 bushels in the week ending Nov. 1, against 1,199,000 bushels in the preceding week; Canadian wheat flour shipped from United States ports totaled 27,000 barrels against 33,000 and United States wheat flour exported amounted to 227,000 barrels against 256,000.

FORTUNES OF HOOVER TIED UP WITH VOTE

Wets and Drys Turn Anxious Eyes Upon Prohibition Battles in U. S.

BY BYRON PRICE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

In an election weighted with uncertainties the nation is deciding today who shall sit in congress and in the places of authority at 32 state capitals.

A Democratic swing away from the great Republican majorities of 1928 is conceded, but its extent is so belated, even in the private reckonings of party leaders, that only the returns themselves can tell the story.

During their campaign of attack on President Hoover's conduct of his administration in the business crisis, the Democrats are acknowledged even by the Republican stalwarts to have menaced seriously Republican dominance in the house, and reduced the Republican margin in the senate. As a result, control of senate or house, or both, by a Democratic-independent coalition, was a possibility.

Prohibition, unrecognized by either party as a national issue, has all but evaporated the stage in many localities and any returns will be scrutinized with extreme interest by wets and drys.

Not only are the possible fortunes of President Hoover in 1932 thus entangled with today's verdict at the polls, but the result is fraught with potentialities for other outstanding figures in American politics.

Among other things, the election will decide whether Franklin D. Roosevelt, groomed by his supporters for the presidency, will be re-elected governor of New York or voted out of public life.

Fair weather over nine-tenths of the country helped to swell attendance at the polls where the local contests had been warmest for governor, senator, representative in congress or minor state office, but failed to produce an impressive turnout in the many districts having but nominal disputes to decide.

Associated Press dispatches indicated early in the day that the national total would fall far below the record set in the Hoover-Smith campaign of two years ago.

When local campaign emissaries were bitterest, special precautions were taken against disorders and the early hours produced few disorders. At Danville, Ky., a Negro was fatally shot in an election quarrel, and at Buckner, Mo., two arrests followed the reported kidnapping of an election official.

New Ashford, Mass., which prides itself on voting its entire population earlier than any other election district in the country, came in with the first returns. Its vote showed the customary overwhelming Republican majority, little changed from the total of two years ago, when the Democrats carried the state for president and senator but lost the governorship to the Republicans.

Chicago, Detroit and some other lake cities voted in a heavy fog during the morning. In Philadelphia and southward along a portion of the Atlantic coast it was raining or threatening rain. Kansas, in the middle of the sunshine belt, furnished a surprise by turning out a vote heard of in some sections, than that of 1928.

Democrats Forecast Landslide Victory At Polls Today

G. O. P. LOOKS FOR LOSS OF MANY SEATS

In Spite of Much Talking Neither Side Can Predict Exact Results

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1930, By Post Pub. Co.
Washington—(CPA)—The outstanding characteristics of the situation on the eve of the national congressional election is the uncertainty of the outcome.

The Democrats are absolutely confident of a landslide—the Republicans concede that they will lose many seats—neither side can predict with certainty exactly how the election will turn out. The logic and tradition of politics would seem to point to a victory for the Democrats no matter whether they gain control of the house of representatives or miss getting control by a few seats for they will make substantial gains. This is because the party in power always suffers from popular discontent or unrest and this year there are two principal causes of irritation, namely, the effect of prohibition as reflected in the development of the bootlegger and gangster, and the effects of the economic depression as revealed in widespread unemployment.

The Democrats are not sure whether they can gain control of the senate. Certainly all the senatorial contests in the doubtful states contain so many complicated factors that it is hard to make any calculations in advance.

ILLINOIS DOUBTFUL
Democratic senators however may be looked for from Massachusetts, Ohio, and Kentucky, with Democratic governors in New York and Pennsylvania. Illinois is doubtful with the man on the street predicting the election of former Senator Lewis, Democrat, though the attitude of the rural districts is an unknown quantity. The result in the house of representatives based on a conservative appraisal of the situation would seem to indicate that a half dozen seats either way will be the ultimate majority. Anything which is as close as that might be swung toward the Republican or Democratic side by a change in only six districts out of four hundred and thirty-five, it is quite possible therefore that the result may not be known on election night.

If the Democrats gain control even by a narrow majority it will give them the opportunity to organize the house and gain committee chairmanships but the result of Tuesday's election would not be felt until a year from next December unless of course President Hoover should call an extra session sometime after March 4, 1931, when the present congress goes out of office.

LOOK TOWARD 1932
There is no denying that the outcome of the congressional elections will be a factor in the 1932 presidential contest. It will be used as a yardstick in measuring the political strength of Mr. Hoover and unquestionably it will stimulate the Democrats because they will have made some real gains. In 1910 mid-way in the Taft administration when the Democrats captured the house it was the forerunner of a Democratic national victory in 1912. Again in 1918 in the middle of Mr. Wilson's second term the loss of both houses of congress by the Democrats foreshadowed a Republican victory in 1920.

Thus Tuesday's election is a critical moment in political history and an unusually big vote for an off-year election may be anticipated. Republicans have been prepared more or less for a big loss of seats and they will regard it as a triumph indeed if they retain control of both houses by a slender margin.

From a practical standpoint a change in control from one party to the other would not mean very much on legislation because the insurgent groups in both houses probably would hold the balance of power as they always do when either one of the big parties get numerical control by a narrow margin. Mr. Hoover may be just as well off under those circumstances as with the situation that has existed in the last two years for he has been dealing with an adverse coalition in the senate and he had to compromise with the senate in order to get legislation passed. He still will have the veto power to enable him to stop what he may regard as dangerous legislation but as for affirmative programs he will be compelled to depend on compromises irrespective of the number of seats gained or lost in the house of representatives by either party, for everybody agrees that neither political party is going to control the senate.

GOOD NEBRASKA WEATHER
Lincoln, Neb.—(CP)—Clear, warm weather today brought out a good early vote in Nebraska's election. Spokesmen for the political parties predicted that Nebraska would poll approximately 425,000 votes. Two years ago, the state recorded its greatest total, when 554,762 voters cast ballots in the presidential election.

MAYOR WATSON TO OPPOSE RAISING OF LAKE WINNEBAGO

Fond du Lac Official Charges Water Power Interests Behind Movement

Mayor George W. Watson of Fond du Lac has announced that he will side with the Association for the Relief of High Water at Oshkosh in its efforts to have the level of Lake Winnebago retained at a point 15 inches above the crest of the Menasha dam, the level now maintained under an agreement between the association and the water power interests.

Last week at Kaukauna the mayors and other city officials of the Fox river valley organized a permanent group which will fight to increase the level of the lake so that there will be water available to flush the Fox river during the summer. Mayor B. W. Fargo of Kaukauna is president of the group. The mayors claim that flushing the river will prevent killing of fish and the result an odor which with which the valley cities were afflicted last summer.

Mayor Watson, a director of the Oshkosh association, charged water power interests are behind the Kaukauna movement. This is the same charge that was made by Alan H. Tapp, Oshkosh, president of the association.

"To raise the level to twenty-one inches would mean a level of twenty-four to thirty inches at our end of the lake and we would be flooded out during the spring," the mayor said.

"The cities represented at the Kaukauna meeting are not interested in the lake level, for it does not affect their property. It's the water power interests that are behind it, they just want cheaper power."

WALL STREET QUIET OVER VOTE TODAY

Few One-sided Bets Are Offered, but Little Cash Appears

Copyright, 1930, By Cons. Press
New York—(CPA)—The eve of the election found Wall Street absolutely apathetic over the results at the polls today if bets placed be any criterion.

Dwight W. Morrow, who was a 4 to 1 favorite over his Democratic opponent, Alexander Simpson, in the New Jersey senatorial contest, has lengthened his odds to 5 to 1 without bringing out any Simpson money.

Franklin D. Roosevelt is now a 6 to 1 favorite over his Republican opponent, Charles E. Tuttle, for the governorship of New York as against five to one up to the last weekend. The largest bet placed so far in the financial district on the election is $12,000 to $2,000 that Roosevelt wins. Some money remains unplaced, that Roosevelt will carry the state by 240,000 votes.

Over in the silk-stocking district, Louis B. Brodsky, Democrat, is an 8 to 5 favorite over Congressman Ruth B. Pratt, Republican, as against five to one formerly, while no money is being bet on Heywood Brown, who up to the weekend was a 20 to 1 favorite over Mrs. Pratt. Some even money is offered that columnist Brown does not poll 10,000 votes in his district. There is no betting on any other contests.

REFORMATION IS CELEBRATED IN MANY CHURCHES

The Reformation was commemorated in most Lutheran churches Sunday, All Saints day was observed in all Catholic churches Saturday, All Souls day on Monday, and Forty Hours of devotion was held in St. Joseph church over the weekend. During the coming week the governing bodies of a number of churches will meet, and most Ladies Aid and other women's societies will hold regular monthly meetings.

Reformation services were held at First English Lutheran, Zion Lutheran, First Reformed, St. John and St. Paul churches Sunday. The Reformation service at St. Matthew church was held a week ago, and at Mount Olive Friday night because Sunday was devoted to a mission festival. The speakers at the mission festival were the Rev. F. Reier of Dale and the Rev. A. Haentzel of Madison.

The Reformation service was held early at the St. Matthew church so preparations for an anniversary service to be held next Sunday could get under way. The sixth anniversary of the dedication of St. Matthew church will be held next Sunday with special services. Speakers will be the Rev. Theophil Uetzmann and the Rev. Leonard Koening of Manitowish and the Rev. H. Koch of Redwood. The ladies of the church will serve a chicken dinner.

Theodore Marth of Zion Lutheran church preached on Jesus and His Father's house at the Reformation service Sunday morning. The Rev. F. M. Brandt of The Burning and Shining Light, and the Rev. F. C. Reuter preached on the Augsburg Confession at First English Lutheran church. The ladies society will meet this week to make plans for its bazaar and social on Nov. 12.

He referred to the opinions of Einstein and Steinhmetz that new discoveries will be in the realm of the spiritual rather than in science, and said that as our ancestors fought physical forces which they did not understand, so does the modern person fight unseen forces which some time in the future will be revealed. Explaining how one is relentlessly pushed from youth into middle age, from middle age into old age, and from old age into the Great Unknown, Dr. Holmes stated that just as one has landed on his feet in all other steps of his life, so will he land on his feet in the leap into the Great Unknown.

STIMSON BUSY WITH PROBLEM IN PALESTINE

Gets Many Pleas for Action from Jewish Leaders in United States

Washington—(AP)—Secretary Stimson, pressed by an outpouring of appeals for action, from Jewish leaders in the United States, is giving active consideration to the Palestine problem.

The secretary declined, until he had the full facts before him, to make any public statement on the situation which resulted from the restriction on further Jewish immigration into Palestine imposed by the British government—holder of a league of nations mandate over the territory.

Immediately upon the arrival by diplomatic pouch from London of a mass official documents relating to the new British declaration of policy the secretary began a study of the entire problem.

Several alternatives are open to the American government and the secretary has sought the advice of officials of the near eastern division of the department in an effort to shape his policy.

One course of action which may be taken by the secretary is the issuance of a public statement giving the viewpoint of the American government whether it considers the rights of American Jews affected by the new British policy. Another course would be representations to the British in the event it were believed American rights are affected and a third alternative is a strict hands-off policy if the British policy is held commensurate with the best interests of the mandated territory.

Under the Balfour declaration, made by Lord Balfour when foreign minister of Great Britain in 1917, Great Britain was asserted to favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish race.

In the declaration, however, was a clause that this home was favored so long as it did not interfere with the rights of other nationals in the territory. The Arab populace, which has long opposed the Jewish influx, has clashed with Jews on several occasions with loss of life to each side.

American rights, of the same status as those of nationals of the league of nations members' countries, were recognized by Great Britain in an Anglo-American treaty in 1924. At the same time the United States recognized Great Britain's mandate over the territory. Any action which might be taken by the United States would be taken under this convention.

There appears to be no doubt in the minds of officials here that the Election Glimpses In U. S.

New Ashford, Mass.—(AP)—New Ashford, with 36 voters, was the first place in Massachusetts to count its ballots today. The vote was: For Governor: Allen (R) 29; Ely (D) 7. For U. S. Senator: Butler (R) 29; Coolidge (D) 4.

The polls opened at 5:45 a. m., and a half hour later all the registered voters in the town had recorded their vote. On a referendum asking the people whether or not they would repeal the state prohibition enforcement law the vote was yes, 11, no, 15.

BROWN FIRST AT POLLS
New York—(AP)—Heywood Brown, Socialist candidate for representative in the 17th Congressional district cast the first ballot in his home precinct at the lower edge of the "silk stocking" Park-ave zone. Brown's campaign opponents were Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt, Republican and Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky, Democrat.

ONE-MAN PRECINCT
New York—(AP)—Although its day-time population is among the densest in the city, one Times-sq. election district today yielded but a single voter. It was the 38th precinct of the 10th assembly district, west of Broadway in 40th-st, where George Schrader, who tends a boiler in a nearby skyscraper, cast his solitary ballot.

Election officials said Schrader's vote cost the city $1,127.65. Six election employees and four party watchers were required to handle the ballot.

Schrader said his was an "unemployment" ballot, as he intended to give up his franchise but decided that to do so would throw a whole set of election clerks out of work.

During registration week six clerks and three policemen waited five days at the precinct for Schrader to show up and enroll. On Saturday evening he appeared with the explanation that he wanted to make sure the staff got a full week's pay.

At 6 o'clock this evening the clerks will record the lone voter's will. He will not enjoy the constitutional privilege of casting a secret ballot. When the machine is opened his choice will be obvious.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Lindbergh Inspects New Air Route

Old J. Pluvius had something to say about Col. Charles Lindbergh's plans for a tour of inspection of the new transcontinental air route which is to offer 36-hour passenger, mail and express service. Colonel Lindbergh, who is technical advisor to Transcontinental and Western Air Transport, Inc., here is shown at the Camden, N. J., Central Airport with Hollingshead Taylor, left, of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, and H. G. Andrews, right, pilot. Later, between Pittsburgh and Columbus, Colonel Lindbergh encountered heavy fog, snow, rain and sleet, and was forced to turn back before completing his flight.

Post-Crescent Staff To Work All Night On Election

Routine hours of humdrum day will mean nothing Tuesday night when the polls close to the staff of the Appleton Post-Crescent and more than 2,000 other people who will cooperate in gathering and compiling returns of Tuesday's statewide general election for the Associated Press and its member newspapers.

Immediately after the last ballot has been marked Tuesday evening the big task of gathering the returns from every nook and corner of Wisconsin will begin as the polling officials open their boxes to tabulate results in each of the 2,826 precincts of the state.

At each precinct the primary task of ascertaining winners begins with reporting of its results to auditors of the 71 counties in the state or to special tabulating centers. By telephone and telegraph results will journey to district centers and from there wires again will be called upon to speed the movement of the returns to the central tabulating office set up in the Milwaukee bureau of the Associated Press.

Throughout Tuesday night, Wednesday, Wednesday night, Thursday, longer if necessary, to determine the outcome of the races with exactness, this machine made up of cooperating men and women will function at top speed grinding out the dramatic verdict of victor and vanquished—the climax of another political campaign.

At Milwaukee arrangements, which have required weeks to make following a plan developed by the Associated Press in years of tabulating returns in every state, will be complete and ready to inspire fast and accurate tabulation of the results.

Expert accountants and skilled operatives of tabulating machines will keep up-to-minute totals as the returns pour in, spelling the outcome of each race.

Special emphasis has been placed to obtain as early as possible the information whether Philip F. LaFollette, Republican, or Charles Hamersley, Democrat, is to be the next governor of Wisconsin.

Staffs of various state newspapers besides tabulating local returns will serve as strategic vote-gathering centers. The Post-Crescent will gather the vote from Outagamie and Calumet-counties, and speed them to Milwaukee as it is contribution to the election-result machine.

Because official returns are not available until more than a week after elections, the Associated Press election machinery has told the story of the outcome of Wisconsin elections first and accurately for years gone by. Not until the outcome is established with absolute certainty does tabulating of the results of any race cease.

HOLD PLAY TRYOUTS FOR COLLEGE FRESHMEN

Try outs for a series of three one-act plays to be given by the freshmen of Lawrence college were held in the Little Theatre at Lawrence Memorial chapel Monday afternoon. According to a new plan inaugurated this year by F. Theodore Cloak, director of dramatics, the freshmen will receive the necessary experience from these plays to make them eligible for the all college productions later. Another feature of this new plan will be the opportunity given experienced members of Sunset Players to direct these plays. The students chosen to direct this first series of plays, which are to be given Jan. 3 and 4, are Margaret Heckle, John Cinkosky and Carmen Negrescu. The junior directors will work under the supervision of Mr. Cloak. The plays are entitled "The Dark of the Dawn," "Young Americans," and "Suppressed Desires." Friday evening "The Truth About Blids," the first all-college production of the season, will be presented in Lawrence Memorial chapel. The play, written by A. A. Milne, was first staged at The Gaiety Theatre in London in 1921. Tickets may be purchased and reserved at Bell's Drug Store now.

Montreal, Que., (CPA)—Canada was all wrought up over Tuesday's elections in the United States. Against the background of possibly remote but to the Canadians sharply outlined tariff and prohibition issues, the Dominion sees the national congressional battle as a struggle of momentous interest to its own future concerns.

The tightening up of the border has unstableness the major bootlegging industry and diverted a large flow of alcohol to the safer clearance ports of Miquelon and Saint Pierre, whence it gains entry to the states through the broken and devious coast line of Maine or havens to the south.

The generally disturbed condition has brought to Canada a somewhat more dangerous and venturesome type of liquor exporter and there is a widespread fear that the infection of racketeering is creeping across the boundary. "From the graft-ridden and crime-ridden nation to the south," as one newspaper puts it, "it is true that incipient extortion enterprises, from which Canada has been free in the past, have been taking shape in the larger Canadian cities."

"CLEAN HOUSE," CRY

"Let the United States clean house," is the outcry of the Canadian press. But as to whether this is to be accomplished by a Democratic or a Republican victory there is quite as much a division of opinion as there is on the other side of the boundary. The newspapers are filled with long special dispatches from Washington analyzing and prophesying, with a general agreement that the outcome of the elections will show Democratic gains.

Prohibition and the tariff are almost invariably stressed as issues, the former on account of Canadian growing uneasiness over confusion and outlaws, and the latter on account of an energetic campaign for national economic rehabilitation, inevitably affected by United States tariff policies. If the Democrats should win congress tend start lowering tariffs, a new deal would be necessary in an aggressive movement for economic independence which already has gone a long way in Canada.

While there is unquestionably widespread popular resentment against the higher United States tariffs, the retaliatory tariffs established here already are giving indications of a new influx of United States branch factories into Canada. There are now about 1,350 such branches here, with nearly 400,000 men employed. One leading group of Canadian industrialists who at first deplored the higher U. S. tariff now see in it a strong stimulus to the development of Canadian industry, through the drift of capital to this side of the tariff wall.

SEEKS NEW TRADE

In spite of the doubtful outcome of the imperial conference, with regard to tariff preferences for Dominion products, there are marked indications of growing trade reciprocity between Canada and Great Britain and a movement of British capital and industry to the Dominion. Before the war higher tariffs brought producing capital into Canada and trade analysts see this happening again, under the higher protection of the Bennett government. It was stated here Monday on presumably good authority, that the German Krupp are planning a large plant in eastern Canada.

Canada is reaching out aggressively for new trade agreements, all over the world, particularly with France and Japan, seeing the possibility of a vastly extended wheat market in both countries. There is a touch of Chauvinism in Canadian discussions of new adaptations to tariffs and world depression with an almost evangelic mobilization of public opinion behind a great economic drive to employ to the utmost the country's vast natural resources and to make advantageous trade agreements wherever and whenever possible.

A. L. Lawes, general manager of the Montreal Shipping Company, Ltd., reported that for the first time in history a cargo ship would sail directly from Montreal to Japan. This will be the France Maru, a Japanese vessel, leaving about Nov. 15 with grain, flour and other merchandise.

PLAN STOCK SHIPMENTS

Robert Weir, minister of agriculture of Great Britain, has just been in Canada, successfully arranging for large shipments of cattle to England. There are innumerable instances of Canada's aggressive outreach for new trade all over the world.

"The uncertainty of tariff conditions in the United States is driving Canada to world commitments in and out of the empire," a veteran Montreal grain exporter told this correspondent. "The United States has more natural resources more machinery and raw materials than any other nation in the world, but it is apt to wake up and find itself crowded out of first place through its lack of stable, industrial statesmanship and its general ineptitude in world relationships. We feel that we could adjust ourselves either to higher or lower tariffs if we could be sure of some continuance and certainty in anything they do in the states. Our hope is that, regardless of who wins in this election in the states, some enlightened tariff policy will come out of it so that we can work out a long range program."

RADIO COMMISSION TRYING TO CONFORM DISTRIBUTION LAW

Two Proposals for Definite Action Presented to Federal Body

BY ROBERT MACK
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
Washington—(CPA)—A really serious effort to conform to the letter of the radio law requiring an equal distribution of broadcasting facilities among the states according to population, is being made by the federal radio commission.

With two proposals for definite action before it and others likely to follow, the commission is trying to determine how it best can bring to even keel the top-sided distribution of broadcasting stations, power and hours of operation. To reshuffle the entire existing set-up of 620 broadcasting stations would be administrative suicide and any thought of a general reallocation definitely has been abandoned.

The problem confronting the commission is that of equalizing the distribution of facilities as among the 48 states. Just 25 states and the District of Columbia are "under-quota" while the remaining 23 states have more than their proportional share of broadcasting facilities.

OFFERED TWO PLANS

Last week two plans were offered. Commissioner Ira E. Robinson proposed that the commission boost the assignments of the under-quota states and bring them up to their pro-rata shares, without molesting the "over-quota" states. Commissioner William D. L. Starbuck suggests that the over-quota states relinquish their excessive facilities to the delinquent states through regular administrative procedure.

It is understood that at least one additional plan will be submitted as a means to the end so feverishly sought. Vice chairman E. O. Sykes is contemplating such a move.

The commission has learned from experience the folly of any drastic redistribution. It did this in the fall of 1923, scattering assignments of stations throughout the country. Listeners had to acquaint themselves with the new line-up and relog their sets to get the dial location of their favorite stations.

Judge Robinson's plan for compliance with the radio law sets out a gradual procedure. He would increase the power of local and regional stations in under-quota areas on the basis of allocations existing in over-quota states.

New stations would be authorized in areas not having adequate service and where engineering principles would not be violated.

"Entanglements" which handicap the commission in withdrawing facilities from over-quota areas, Judge Robinson states, make advisable a plan such as he suggests. "It is not my purpose to withdraw facilities from over-quota states, but to allow facilities to be added to under-quota states on the same score of separation (geographical and ether) that has been used in other parts of the country." As time goes on, Judge Robinson believes that there will be a mortality of stations by which the commission may gradually reduce the facilities in the over-quota states.

NOTHING TO FEAR

In a drawing room a famous composer met a lady singer who loved to display her talent.

"Will you be good enough to sing us something?"

"Oh, I'm so frightened, sir: there are so many people..."

"What about it?" answered the master, assuringly. "No one's listening!"—Moustique, Charleroi.

NAVY AIR CORPS EYES "WINDMILL" TYPE OF AIRPLANE

Two Autogiro Planes Ordered by U. S. Department for Test Purposes

BY SHERMAN B. ALTICK
New York—(CPA)—While the army air corps is developing and studying both high and low winged monoplanes as potential winged messengers of death and destruction, its rival, the navy air corps is turning to the latest development in the art of flying—the autogiro or "windmill" plane—it was learned here Monday.

Two of the planes, which resemble huge Jersey mosquitos in flight, have been ordered by the navy department from the Pitcairn-Cierva company at Philadelphia.

The navy department also is studying the high speed monoplane, and like the army probably will displace the present biplane equipment in the service with the fleet type of craft. Several days ago Capt. Frank M. Hawks flew to Washington and was the guest of David R. Ingalls, assistant secretary of navy for aeronautics.

Capt. Hawks flew to Anacostia in his Texaco 13, the low wing monoplane in which he established his transcontinental record of 121 hours and his dazzling 270-mile an hour speed on his flight from Philadelphia to this city in 20 minutes. When he landed at the naval air station he was greeted by Mr. Ingalls and high officials of the navy, who not only inspected every part of his speedy craft, but examined the speed data which Capt. Hawks was asked to bring with him.

Since that time it has been furnished that the navy department was considering the purchase of several of the tiny craft and that eventually this branch of the military would abandon the slower biplane as a military machine, like most of the powers of Europe already have done.

Several weeks ago it was stated that the autogiro, because of its ability to hover, land perpendicularly and fly almost straight up, was being studied as a military machine. It was learned then that the possibility of using the autogiro to displace the "sausage" or captive balloon was being studied and that aeronautical engineers believed it entirely feasible.

At Philadelphia at the present time the autogiro engineers are constructing a model which they expect to attain a high speed of 150 miles an hour and a low speed of twenty.

Engineers believe this speed can be increased. The present windmill planes have a top speed of 140 miles an hour and a low of 18 to 25.

The Pitcairn company has begun commercial production of the autogiro and within a few weeks expects to make delivery of a number of the windmill planes to private owners. It was announced.

END OF KOHLER CASE

While the decision of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin in effect dismissing the appeal of the Progressive complainants in the Kohler case is disappointing to both sides and probably to the public, it is recognized generally by attorneys as in conformity to long-established legal principles.

The case in its ordinary course would not be reached for presentation to the Supreme Court until January and after Mr. Kohler had ceased to be governor. Obviously in such a situation it became moot, a mere argument, for with Mr. Kohler out of office no judgment expelling him from office would be of any value and were Mr. Kohler successful the judgment could only be a matter of personal satisfaction.

The Supreme court reiterates the principle that a court is not instituted for the purpose of deciding anything except living issues of substance and will not proceed to decide a case where it knows in advance that its decision can be to no effective purpose.

The court, while realizing that "the decision would be of interest and perhaps to some extent a guide in the application of a general principle of law to a particular situation" determined that the case was no other from a court standpoint than the hundreds of cases already decided by that court involving the principle of agency around which the decision in the Kohler case turned.

The only question involved in Mr. Kohler's trial was whether certain amounts of money were spent "by and on his behalf." The court had decided that the expression "by and on his behalf" means "by someone who acts for him in the sense that an agent acts for and on behalf of his principal," and that "the authority may be express or implied but it must exist, otherwise the disbursement is not made on behalf of the person sought to be charged."

The case was tried upon this theory. The dispute was whether or not the money was spent on Mr. Kohler's behalf in the sense defined. The jury decided that it was not. The circuit judge who tried the case declared that there was no evidence whatever to indicate any violation of the corrupt practices act. Despite the interest of the public and of the parties it is unlikely that a decision of the case would affect the future in any particular because the evidence in no two cases is ever the same.

The court has construed the corrupt practices act and future cases, if any arising under it must be tried according to each particular statement of the evidence.

As a matter of fact, and this is borne out plentifully by the record, the unanimous verdict of the jury, the opinion of an impartial circuit judge, there was never any genuine basis for the commencement of the action. Despite the presumed good faith of its instigators they came into court without evidence to prove a single violation of the corrupt practices act upon Mr. Kohler and they must have known it when the trial opened. The trial was an exploration, a fishing expedition, upon the theory that the Progressives had nothing to lose, possibly something to gain, and that they might keep before the public the musty charge that a man had bought his way into office, laying particular stress upon thousands of dollars that were spent for banners, advertisements and printed material but walking with soft step when any mention was made by the army of political speakers with which they themselves covered the state.

Mr. Kohler's friends chose a different form than used by the Progressives in presenting their candidate to the electors, perhaps a more expensive one, but lawful nevertheless. The undisputed evidence shows the expenditure of less than $60,000 but in spite of this known fact Progressive speakers started the primary campaign declaring "over $100,000" was spent and ended with "over $250,000." By the next campaign it will be "over half a million dollars." If the heat of our political controversies could be diverted to the growth of corn, the blazing Kansas sun would be unnecessary to a tall and vigorous crop.

MORE OIL

There was a time when oil was looked upon as an article that smoothed out troubled waters but in our public life it has come to have a loathsome aspect. A scent of it brings up visions of Fall and Daugherty and their infamy. The scathing and indignant indictment of Ralph S. Kelley, former field agent of the Department of the Interior, by President Hoover for his alleged "baseless accusations in an attempt to charge odious oil scandals to this administration," shows that the president has correctly gauged the temper of the American people in relation to the importance of protecting the public interest in the vast territory which it owns whether underrun by oil, containing mineral deposits or covered with forests. Newspaper articles, charges and countercharges, do not constitute a satisfactory manner of handling a matter of this nature for only by inquiry through judicial officers or committees clothed with power to swear and examine witnesses and produce evidence can the exact facts be ascertained.

It will be remembered that when Mr. Hoover took office he prohibited the further leasing or passing of title in relation to about three million acres which the government holds and all of which has been held intact under his order. This order did not and could not relate to some 43,000 acres concerning which rights of others had intervened or accrued under a former act of congress. It is in relation to the approval of old title claims to these 43,000 acres that the Kelley charges relate. Kelley declared that "hundreds of thousands of acres of land" were alienated. Such is not the fact. Kelley charged that important papers in relation to the transfer were destroyed. The secretary of the interior produced the papers. Kelley charged that the lands were worth "scores of billions of dollars." The lands are what is known as oil shale lands which are at the present time of little value and will continue to be of little value unless the "gushers" are exhausted because under present conditions oil from these lands cannot be refined economically and in competition with wells producing more plentifully. It also appears from the correspondence made public by the secretary of the interior that when Mr. Kelley made his first charges he was invited by the secretary to Washington to discuss them, that he came to Washington, stayed there for a period of six weeks, made no effort to see the secretary of the interior or to lay the facts before him but spent his time in writing his story and sold it for a goodly sum to the New York World, at the same time stating that he did not want to submit the facts to any governmental inquiry because he would not be treated fairly, a reason that does not ring very true. In this regard the language of the secretary of the interior is apt: "Mr. Kelley's charges either are meritorious or they are false. If they are false, his failure to meet me or discuss them with me explains itself. If they are meritorious he is in the unenviable position of having had before him the choice of making his information an asset to his government or making it merchandise for sale."

If even a superficial examination of Kelley's charges reveals the existence of probable cause to believe the public interest has not been fully protected then there should be an exhaustive inquiry to get at the facts. But it is a sign of the times, and a healthy one, to see Mr. Hoover drop the important details of his office to personally examine into the situation. He shows thereby a jealous regard for his reputation and the reputation of his administration. His selection of cabinet members and his appointments generally have indicated not only a zeal to attempt to protect the public interests from trespass and exploitation but an almost puritanical regard for unbending moral principles in the administration of his high office.

David Crockett was a member of the United States Congress for three terms—from 1827 to 1831, and again from 1833 to 1835. His opposition to President Jackson led to his defeat.

Today's Anniversary

RODIN'S DEATH
On Nov. 4, 1840, Auguste Rodin, a French sculptor, and one of the greatest of all times, was born in Paris of a poor family.

His only general education was at a school maintained by his uncle at Beuval. At 14 he entered a school for decorative art in Paris and later, studying under Barye, he began to exhibit in the salon. First of his works to attract attention was a head called the "Broken Nose." Though he modeled this at 22, critics regard it as one of the most powerful of his works.

After service in the army in the Franco-Prussian War, Rodin gained considerable attention by his statue the "Age of Bronze." He later received the commission for the bronze door of the Museum of Decorative Arts. The door was never finished but the figures and groups Rodin prepared for it are among his best works. Among them are "The Thinker" and "Adam and Eve."

"Rodin's art," wrote a critic, "is the culmination of the naturalistic sculpture of the nineteenth century, and yet in knowledge of anatomy and profound mastery of technique he stands with Michelangelo."

PREVENTION AND CURE OF DENTAL CARIES.

Big time health authority (fortunes of politics) resigned from medical society in a blue funk or something because official censors of the society criticized his practice of lending the use of his name to advertisers of merchandise purporting to have health value. In thus resigning under fire the errant civil servant argued that there should be no objection to anything he might do in the way of health education for the public.

Oh, well, that's probably the way some of these society leaders would explain their agility in writing testimonials for the right brands of merchandise.

Somehow I despair of ever going to congress or even—but, let me tell you, I still have a working majority of my own teeth, and they're not bad teeth either. Thanks, of course, to a good dentist. What Sandy MacPherson would drop into the collection plate on a very dark Sunday would keep me in tooth-brushes for twenty years. I reckon I save enough by not using such things to pay for my tobacco, and I don't mean alfalfa.

Junian D. Boyd, M. D. and C. L. Drain, D. D. S., reported two years ago the spontaneous healing of cavities in the teeth of children who were kept on a diet (for diabetes) that happened to contain liberal proportions of milk, cream, butter, eggs, cod liver oil, bulky vegetables and fruit. The children received insulin as well as the proper diet for their diabetes, but this probably had no particular bearing on the healing of the cavities.

These observers found that some teeth showing unquestionable spontaneous arrest of caries were in the most poorly kept mouths, and they state that many adult mouths which do not receive any care (meaning brushing the teeth) and have exposed dentin (that is, a break or erosion of the enamel surface of the teeth) show little or no evidence of cavity formation.

That's just what I have long believed, and indeed I long ago bet my teeth on the soundness of my belief. Mind, I see no serious objection in the practice of brushing the teeth with almost any soap or dentifrice one may prefer, but I insist this rite has nothing to do with the conservation of the teeth, except, of course, in cases of specific disease where one's dentist prescribes such treatment.

The character of the diet, however, has everything to do with the development and the saving of the teeth. Drs. Boyd and Drain outline the essentials of the diet for this purpose—plenty of good fresh raw milk, cream, butter, fresh eggs, bulky vegetables, fruits, and, for perspective mothers, nursing mothers, young infants and some young children, a daily ration of plain cod liver oil. Such diet provides the materials from which teeth are built, as well as the vitamins which are essential for the utilization of the materials.

These authorities exempt saliva and bacterial fermentation or decomposition in the mouth as a factor of tooth decay or cavity formation (caries). Such cause of mouth acidity, as I believe, a normal condition, and requires no treatment or preventive fussing.

I am glad to send to any reader who asks for it and encloses stamped envelope bearing his address, instructions for the care and preservation of the teeth, the chief of these being: Visit your dentist regularly.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Bike For Girl.
I intend to buy a bicycle for my 14 year old niece. She wants a boy's bike. I would like to know if it is all right for her to ride a boy's bike. (Mrs. L. E. L.)

Answer.—Yes. The only reason why the bicycle frames were made without the cross-bar for women in the naive decade was that they wore skirts in those days. Thus the occasional girl in "Bloomers" on a man's bicycle, was a bold hussy.

By Hal Cochran

THE pony on which Clowdy rode seemed very glad to have a load upon his back. He pranced around and Clowdy cried, "I hope that I don't spill. This little fellow's very peppy and he doesn't seem to want to stand. Just watch me ride him, Tinymites, and you will get a thrill!"

"Well, go ahead," one Tiny cried. "You're hopping 'round. Why don't you ride?" Almost anyone can do as well as you are doing now. If you are scared to let him run, get down and let me have some fun. If I am given just one chance, I'll shortly show you how."

Then Clowdy shouted, Giddyapp! The pony got a friendly slap, which made him start to gallop down the little winding street. This made the whole bunch laugh in glee and Clowdy shouted, "Mercy me! I hope he doesn't run away. This ought to be a treat!"

Around and round the pony went and then the pony owner, sent the other Tinyites out to bring poor Clowdy safely back. They grabbed the reins. The pony stopped. All of a sudden Clowdy flopped. "That's all your fault," cried Clowdy. "Common sense you Tinyies lack."

Just then a small cart came in sight and Carpy cried, "Say, that's just right for all of us to ride in. Come, let's take a little spin." The man who owned the cart agreed and Clowdy cried, "That's all we need!" They ran up to the little cart and promptly piled right in.

The Travel Man stood by and smiled. Thought he, "I'd like to be a child, and have the fun those Times have. They're happy as can be." Wee Scooty drove around a bit. Then Carpy took his turn at it. He shouted, loudly, "I am good! Just keep your eye on me!"

(The Tinymites met the carna- (lien man in the next story.)

As between the girls and the hum- or in current comedies, we'd say a mias was as good as a smile.

A BYSTANDER IN WASHINGTON

BY HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington — On a plateau, 85 feet above the level of the Potomac, in latitude 38 degrees, 53 minutes, 20.4 seconds north and longitude 77 degrees, 00 minutes, 35.7 seconds west from Greenwich, lies a tiny realm.

Thereon sits the capitol of the United States.

In a spacious office, one level below the first floor, may be found the man who is a figurative sovereign of this domain—David Lynn, architect of the capitol.

For something like 30 years he has worked there. For the past seven years he has been in complete charge of the structural and mechanical maintenance of that area.

BIG STAFF
He knows every inch of territory on the hill. It is a part of him. Thus, when old landmarks give way to new and more modern structures—as was the case when the famous old Congress Hall hotel was torn down to make room for the new house office building—it is as if old friends were making their departure.

As architect of the capitol his duties are widespread and many. His staff of more than 500 is kept busy throughout the year seeing to it that everything is spick and span on the hill.

Nor is the capitol building the only structure to which he must give attention.

There are the senate and house office buildings which flank each side of the capitol, the huge capitol power plant located several blocks from the hill, the Library of Congress, the senate and house garages, the Columbia hospital in downtown Washington, the District of Columbia courthouse, and the homes of the court of appeals and the court of claims—all are under his care.

But the capitol is his principal concern.

LET'S CONTRACTS
At present Lynn is in the midst of a tremendous construction program on the hill, which adds to his duties. His position requires that he let contracts for such building.

These projects include the new house office building which is to cost $7,500,000, the new supreme court at a cost of $3,740,000, improvements in the botanic gardens at a cost of $1,476,888, annex to the Library of Congress at a cost of $7,100,000 and completion of the senate office building at a cost of $3,868,650.

And as a member of the public buildings commission, the commission for the enlargement of the capitol grounds, the Library of Congress building commission, the supreme court building commission, and the national memorial commission his time is well occupied.

The open miniature golf championship was played on Lookout Mountain. This is the height of something or other.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK
New York—Manhattan first: Jack Diamond was first called "Legs" by a police reporter, who thought every gangster should have a soubriquet. His intimates call him Jack.

Backgammon lessons cost $5 an hour in one department store and $10 in a sporting goods emporium on Madison avenue. Or $15 an hour at home.

Molly Picon, the allure of Second avenue's Yiddish theaters, is the first star to have her name in those neon lights.

The press department of the Metropolitan opera house has installed a radio so they will have something to listen to these long winter evenings.

TRAVEL TALK
Travelers back from Saxo-Coburg report that the former King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, who has spent some of his exile there with kids-folk, is a butterfly chaser. Netting the insects involves more exercise than the King of England's stamp collecting, but not as much as the ex-kaiser's wood-sawing.

Fall brings back a collegiate racket. Orchestra leaders say that chairman of dance committees often ask that a "raised" bill be sent them. The wise lad who pays the orchestra pockets the difference.

Julius S. Bache, the Park avenue broker, wears a monocle, one of the few in town.

Helen Twelvrees, new star of Hollywood, is one of the few better known by her husband's name. And they are separated. He is Clark Twelvrees, interior decorator.

The producers thought for a while of shortening her name to fit into marquee lights, but decided not to. She's a Brooklyn girl. Her maiden name? I'm sorry, I've forgotten.

BANKS OF BOHEMIA
Greenwich Villagers who have made their names known now are settling, of all places, on the suburban banks of the Hudson. Floyd Dell, Maxwell Anderson and Rollo Peters, for instance.

One colony is between two lofty hills. On one peak is the mansion of Adolph Zukor. On the other is the hotel-like home of Sam Katz. And how the intellectuals scorn this talk.

Vaughn de Leath, contralto croucher of the radio, who got her start here in the early days of broadcasting, was in Paris this summer. Station WTMAM of Cleveland, hearing that a commercial organization was calling for her services, dictated a contract to her by transatlantic telephone and hired her.

"The connection was clearer than any Paris call I had ever had," said Miss De Leath. As though she got one every day.

Movie producers are careful to keep their clean of doubtful associations. Thus "Rain" became "Sadie Thompson" in the films and "The Command of Love is 'Thou-boudoir Diplomat'."

Broadway bankers lightly nullify this. The one in front of "Her Man" shouts, "Screen version of Frankie and Johnny."

People's Forum

The Appleton Post-Crescent invites communications on subjects of general interest. The communications must bear the signatures of the authors as an evidence of their sincerity. But not necessarily for publication. Anonymous communications will not be used. Letters should not be longer than 400 words.

JOHN K. KLINE
Editor Post-Crescent—I was shocked and grieved to read in The Post-Crescent last night of the death of Mr. Kline. It is a real tragedy that his life should be ended so soon. As an editorial writer which was about the only way I knew him, I had the greatest admiration for him. I liked his editorial better than any other editorials I ever read. Part of this may have been because his views on political and current events so often coincided with my own. But that was not the whole reason by any means. He not only clearly differentiated between truth and error, but expressed his convictions convincingly. He was uncompromising and absolutely courageous. He had resources of irony and sly humor which were very bad for humbug to run up against, and judging by my own feelings, must have been a delight to his readers generally.

Sincerely yours,
Edward P. Humphrey.

Indication that Boston is on the up and up is seen in the report that a newspaper there, which has run a chess column for 16 years, has abandoned it to devote more space to backgammon.

BONDS SOMETIMES SHOW INVESTMENT WORTH OF STOCK

If Fixed Interest Bearing Obligations Are Low, It Is Good Sign

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
New York—It is sometimes possible to gauge the investment value of a preferred stock by the rating the market gives to the bonds. If the fixed interest bearing obligations of a corporation sell on a low yield basis it speaks well for the credit of a company and is a point in favor of the preferred stock. Something of course depends on the relative amount of bonds and of preferred stocks outstanding and the test is not conclusive but it is generally helpful.

As an example we may take Consumers Power Company which serves a large part of Michigan with electric light and power and is an old established and prosperous organization. There are three bond issues of this company outstanding and one assumed obligation of a former subsidiary now consolidated. None of these bonds sells in the present market to yield over 4.7 per cent and one of them sells to yield less than 4.5 per cent indicating extraordinary quality.

Consumers Power has four issues of preferred stock, one carrying a 6 per cent rate, one a 6.6 per cent, one a 7 per cent all of $100 par value and one of no par value paying $5 annually. All of these are callable at $105 a share. There is a public interest outside of the territory served in only the 6 per cent and the 6.6 per cent and both of these sell approximately at the call price. This is another sign of merit. The yield at 105 for the 6 per cent is 5.7 per cent which is attractive under present conditions in the money market and the only reason so high a return is available is because there is always the possibility that the company may take advantage of the provision allowing the retirement of the issue.

All these four issues of preferred rank equally in the matter of preference as to dividends. In 1919 earnings available for these dividends were equivalent to $19.47 a share on the combined preferreds which is a large enough margin to satisfy the most conservative.

PROMINENT METHODIST IS DEAD IN MICHIGAN

Flint, Mich.—(AP)—Dr. George Elliott, one of the most prominent figures of the Methodist Episcopal church in the United States and editor of the Methodist Review of New York city, died Sunday at the home of a nephew, Arthur C. Elliott, Flint attorney.

Dr. Elliott, 78, collapsed after occupying the pulpit of the Asbury M. E. church here Sept. 14, preaching a morning service the day preceding the opening of the annual state conference of the Methodist Episcopal church which he came here to attend.

Dr. Elliott was at one time president of the Foundry M. E. church in Washington, D. C. and also held pastorates in several Philadelphia churches.

He was chosen editor of the Methodist Review by the general conference of the church 10 years ago.

Dr. Elliott was regarded as one of the leading authorities on Methodist Episcopal doctrines in the country. He held a number of degrees from various educational institutions.

BEAUTY AIDS FOR KEEPING YOUTHFUL SKIN

BY ALICE HART

Beauty is more than skin deep, but that is all the more reason why you should want to keep the surface view perfect.

Cleanliness is the hand-maiden to loveliness. If your skin is oily, wash your face morning and night in tepid water, using a bland facial soap, and use square of cheese-cloth or a very soft washrag to be sure you get it clean. At other times during the day, when it needs refreshing, use one of the pleasant lotions on the market, or plain witch hazel. When your face is perfectly clean, apply skin food.

Since this climate of ours has a tendency to dry out skins, creams are indispensable in keeping that face one loves to touch. The average woman needs cleansing creams, skin foods, astringents and perhaps one of the muscle oils.

HAVE SKIN ANALYZED
Unless you know something about creams, go to a beauty specialist to have your skin analyzed and get advice on whether you need heavy or light creams. If you are absentminded, you can learn a lot of tricks about beautifying from a single facial.

There is an art to the application of creams and lotions. Use deft, light strokes to avoid stretching the skin. Don't put your cream on the face in gobs. Spread it evenly over the palms of both hands. Then apply it from the chin to the ear, and follow the lines from the nose to the temple.

Always use the upward, outward movement. Employ an upward motion between the eyes, stroke across the forehead, come inward under the eye towards the nose and stroke outward across the lid. This completes a small circle around the eye.

Use the fingertips to work the cream into the skin, always in a rotary motion. The application of lotions is different. They should be placed on pads of cotton and patted into the skin. But the staccato movements should follow the same rotary course.

TOMORROW -- Daily care of youthful skin.

Ask for Kotex if you want real comfort in sanitary protection

Don't think other sanitary pads can give you the same wonderful absorbency, the perfect fit and lasting softness Kotex provides.

If you want perfect comfort and a real feeling of security, you must specify "Kotex" when you buy sanitary pads.

Kotex, the original sanitary pad, is actually five times more absorbent than surgical cotton, by test. The wonderful material of which it is made (Cellucotton—not cotton—absorbent wadding) is laid in many air-cooled layers, each individual layer a quick, complete absorbent in itself. Kotex is guaranteed to give more protection, longer protection than any other sanitary pad.

These unique features Kotex deodorizes—a fact of supreme importance to women who consider daintiness essential to charm.

It is rounded and tapered in such a way as to fit perfectly under the tightest fitting or flimsiest of frocks.

Hospitals specify Kotex

Great hospitals have given their approval to Kotex by actually using 13,000,000 pads this year. Just think what a tribute that is to its hygienic safety!

Nothing else is like Kotex. Be safe. Specify "Kotex" when you order sanitary pads. Kotex Company, Chicago.

KOTEX IS SOFT...

1—Not a deceptive softness, that soon packs into chafing hardness. But a delicate, lasting softness.

2—Kotex filler is far lighter and cooler than cotton, yet absorbs 5 times as much.

3—Deodorizes, safely, thoroughly, by a special process.

4—Disposable, instantly, completely.
Regular Kotex—45c for 12
Kotex Super-Size—65c for 12

The NEW KOTEX BELT

brings new ideals of sanitary comfort! Women to fit, on an entirely new patented principle. Firm yet light; will not curl; perfect-fitting.

The Story of Sue

by MARGERY HALE

CORRINE was careful to see that she was looking unusually well as she started to the bank the next morning. Her dark coat had a huge collar and cuffs of white fur and her small black hat was impish, audacious, and yet at the same time charming. Her gloves and slippers and pocketbook were of lizard skin that matched perfectly, and when her coat swung open there was a gleam of cherry red at her slim white throat.

"It pays to look your best," Corrine had confided to her mirror as she had outlined her red lips with a lipstick of her own make. "Time wears better but it's the surface view that gets you there. Maybe the thing that Cleopatra and Ninon and the girl from Troy had was only skin deep, but most men are near-sighted. And what a navy Helen launched!"

Corrine was perfectly aware that people mentioned her name in whispers as she passed. She was Corrine Becker, the daughter-in-law of the town's wealthiest citizen. She had performed a daring airplane feat and seen her face on the front pages of newspapers over the country. Life was well worth living. Corrine decided that she could conquer almost any giant, even Sybil Lester.

"Did you come for your vouchers, Mrs. Becker?" Sybil addressed her in the clear, cool voice that was cadent without being musical. "I believe your husband called for them."

"Oh, yes? Thank you so much. But I wondered if I could talk to you a minute?" Corrine's lovely chin was just as high as Sybil's and her dark eyes were as impersonal and brightly new. "Four father used to work in the Becker mill when he was a boy, didn't he? Harry's father was telling me about it. Of course he wasn't working in it then, but he remembered because he knew your father, and his own father owned the dirt-making furnaces."

"My father merely worked there in odd minutes," Sybil answered. "Then he's had an odd life, hasn't he, for Harry's father thought it was about four years in all. But he thinks your father is a marvelous business executive now. He's all for him. And he's as glad as he can be that he got his break. He says if he hadn't had the stuff in him he couldn't have taken it."

"I don't think my family affairs are so interesting that I need to take time off from business to discuss them with... with..."

"With me," Corrine supplied cheerfully. "Of course not! But I've been thinking that we have so much in common. My father had the same kind of a start, only he didn't get a break. He's still here. And he wouldn't recover if he lost his job. Playing fair is one of your father's attributes, you know."

"And you mean to imply that I don't?" Sybil's hazel eyes were flashing and her breasts were rising and falling quickly under the knitted brown dress. "I have absolutely nothing to do with your father. His affairs and mine are distinctly separate. Whatever happens to him is no affair of mine!"

"Then it would be rather sporting for you to stop placing imaginary complaints against him, don't you think?" Corrine asked.

"I'm not!"

"Oh yes you are! I know more than you think. And now I'm going to the vice-president and tell him what I know about you, and ask him to keep his eyes on you so you won't pull tricks on my father!"

"You are not?" Suddenly Sybil's hand reached through the grating in front of her cage and tapped Corrine roundly on the cheek.

THIS EATING

There are many complaints about the children who will not eat. "My child refuses to eat cereal or any of the things that are good for him."

O, that phrase, "good for him." It is only human to resent doing things for one's good. The minute we understand that somebody is trying to do us good we are determined to see that they do nothing of the sort. Nobody shall do good unto us if we can help it. But we love to do what is for our pleasure. Why not?

The old notion that if a child enjoyed something, it was bad for him should be laid low by this time. It is rather safe to conclude that if what a child is doing makes him happy it is also doing him good. If he likes to eat a certain dish allow him to do so in moderation, providing it is not something that nobody should eat, say cabbage that has been boiled all day until it smells to heaven and is as brown as your boot. Nobody ought to be allowed to eat such stuff, not even if it makes him happy for the time being. Illness is sure to follow.

But it is only adults who have such tastes. Children like young vegetables that have been cooked in their own juice and have retained all their original color and flavor. They like green things like the hearts of lettuce; red things like tomatoes; gorgeous things like big brown and gold oranges and purple plums and amber grapes. And all of them will do them good, and make them very happy.

A good sauce for appetite is hunger. I believe that most of our complaining children are overfed. The remainder of them are served so unattractively that they rebel. So would we under the same circumstance. How would you like to eat the same cereal, watery, gray, sticky stuff, with milk, day after day, Sunday and Christmas included? Could you eat spinach every day for a year? Toast every teatime, with prunes? Many a complaining child has been served just that way and still his grieving mother sighs, "He won't eat."

A healthy child is hungry three times a day and often. If you serve him just enough, if you vary the menu and serve it attractively, the child will not turn from it.

Why should a child eat the same cereal every day? Why not a variety? And why not skip it occasionally so that he will not feel that it threatens all his days? Why spinach daily? Try carrots and beans and tomatoes and okra and peas and lettuce and potatoes and onions—search the market for attractive food and study how to cook it and how to serve it. It is possible to serve a dish of potatoes, or beans, so that the most jaded palate cannot refuse them. Cooking is an art. It begins with marketing. Then the taste of the children must be considered. Flavor, color, arrangement must be carefully thought out. Feed a child this way, give him nothing between meals, and he will eat. If he is a tiny child whose stomach is filled when he drinks a glass of milk, feed him five times a day instead of three a little each time. Eating ought to be delightful. Take it for granted and it is.

Have You Heard —

An amusing and yet highly useful Christmas gift for feminine friends: a laundry bag for little girls and an excellent soiled handkerchief and lingerie bag for the older ones.

To make the bag, get a doll's head, attached to shoulders and limp little arms. Take a yard of delicate silk or pretty wash material in the color of the older ones.

Double the material left, round up the bottom, finish a slit down the back to put the clothes in through and French seam the bottom and rounding sides. Run an elastic through the top and slide the finished bag up onto the doll's head, under the frill. This allows for removing the bag for frequent laundering. You can make the same bag with a little sailor boy's head and darker material and little boys will like it very much, indeed.

WE WOMEN

by Betty Brainerd

WHAT PRICE POPULARITY

"Dear Betty Brainerd:

Will you please send me a few notes on what the average boy expects of a girl when he takes her out to dinner parties, etc? I am a junior in high school."

You haven't any new set of rules to learn. What the average boy expects is only what the average woman or girl expects of the person she asks to be her guest.

By accepting an invitation you assume a debt of courtesy, which you repay by being as charming and entertaining as you know how. Your host is doing his utmost to give you pleasure. Not if the heavens fall must you by word or gesture indicate that your reaction is otherwise.

You need not be falsely enthusiastic about a show or any other form of amusement you cannot sincerely praise, but you must at least assume an appearance of interest and make some intelligent comment.

If through circumstances beyond your host's control the evening's plans go awry, make the best of the situation. If a sudden storm makes street cars and cabs unavailable, though your best evening slippers are ruined—smile. They will be ruined, anyhow, so you might just as well earn your escort's undying gratitude by being sporting about it.

The girl who makes a practice of exhibiting what she misconstrues as sophistication by criticizing the food at every restaurant, leaving in the middle of a poor show, and denouncing the music at every dance as simply "terrible," is the girl you see with a different escort upon every occasion. The same boy never asks her twice.

Above all, develop your powers of intelligent conversation. Set down for you in books is the clearest thought of the greatest minds of all time. Newspapers and magazines bring to your door a harvest of the world's news. Read as often as you can and about as many subjects as you can.

Avoid those twin deadly social errors—talking about the other boy with whom you spent delightful evenings, and a monologue on your own virtues. If you develop personal charm the other boy will be unnecessary bait, and your personal praise will be unnecessary. It is composed by young men who take you out.

Not even radiant beauty can long hypnotize a boy whose every attempt at conversation is met with blank or an inane reply. As one young man of my acquaintance, in describing such a girl, once remarked: "Beautiful, yes—but if we ever got wrecked on a desert island together I hope they'll be a few scorable monkeys around to save me from going cuckoo."

If you need advice write to the author.

ALL EVEN

"I'm afraid we've made rather a mess of your field," said the mite member of the picnic couple to the farmer on whose grounds they were camping.

"Never mind," the farmer replied. "You should see the mess the village youngsters have made of your car."

—Tit-Bits.

My Neighbor Says—

All flavors except vanilla should be added to candy after it has been taken from the stove. Flavor will not then be lost.

Raised bread should not begin to brown until it has been in the oven 15 or 20 minutes. It should be baked one hour.

Never black a gas stove. The heat from a gas stove is not sufficient to absorb blacking so it runs off. Rub stove off with a cloth wet with olive oil.

White window shades may be successfully cleaned if rubbed with a rough white flannel cloth dipped in flour.

When shoes are wet stuff with tissue paper in the sun or in a dry room. Never dry over register or they will be hard and stiff.

When making blue-water, try adding a little common salt. This helps to distribute the color evenly and prevents the clothes from looking streaked or patchy.

RUSSIAN BLOUSE IS EVENING GOWN

Garment Has Been Transplanted for Formal Purposes in Paris

BY AILEEN LAMONT

Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press

New York — And the Russian blouse has grown up—or down—to be an evening gown. In Paris, where they do such things, they transplant the Russian blouse for formal purposes. They lengthen it to the knee, give it an uneven hem line, and put it over a skirt of the same material. Sometimes, also, they disguise it a bit with a great, big bow at the V-necked back.

Pink about the shade of a "really nice" dawn, is among the chic colors for lingerie just now. Pink, or ivory. Not infrequently the two shades are combined. There are sanctities, knitted silk things with garters, in this down glow of ivory, which fit the figure snugly in lieu of corsets and of brassies. The only other undergarment is a costume slip.

The luscious garnet jewelry, so smart this autumn because so beautiful with many of the seasonal shades of red, has branched out in two directions. It is appearing on costume hand-bags, in little medals or in necklets; and it has even been used as an anklet in the latter instance. It was interspersed with tiny seed pearls.

The groups will start their regular meetings and activities next Monday evening at Wesley hall. Leo Schubart again is captain of the brigade, assisted by Lyall Sillup, Howard Whitton, Waldemar Peterson and Robert Gilman as drillmasters.

It was decided to oppose the matter in congress if it is brought up there.

Old age pension was discussed. It was proposed to establish a home for aged members of the organization. This would be optional, it was said, as those not going to the home would receive a monthly pension instead.

Dennis Lane, international secretary, and John Joyce, general auditor, Chicago, spoke. J. P. McCoy, St. Paul, international vice-president was unable to attend.

START LANDSCAPING ALONG NICOLET-BLVD

New Light Poles to Be Erected on Street Separating Two Cities

Neenah—Landscaping in the center of Nicolet-blvd from N. Commercial-st to the lakeshore has been started before the new light poles are erected. The boulevard separates the two cities, being the north city limits of Neenah and the south limits of Menasha. Since its construction some 15 years ago, the center garden plots have borne nothing but grass, as the two cities could not get together on a plan to improve and beautify it. At a recent meeting of the Neenah council, steps were taken to cooperate with Menasha in lighting up the boulevard with a series of post lights. The ditch in the former program was that Neenah secures its electricity from the Wisconsin Michigan Light Heat, and Power company while Menasha provides its own power. One paid for its electricity while the other got it through its own plant. Several years ago, through generosity of Chris Walter, a series of ornamental posts were placed in the blocks between N. Commercial-st and Second-st in front of his property and that of St. Patrick church. These have been giving service continually since that time. It also is the plan of the two cities to remove the circular plots at the street intersections to give more space for cars and vehicles to turn at the intersections.

Woman May Be Senator After Unusual Election

Chicago—(P)—A choice, unique in American elections because it involved for the first time the question whether a man or a woman should go to the United States senate, was before Illinois voters today.

The decision was left to them after a hectic campaign in which the candidates—Congressman Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican, James Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, and Mrs. Lotie Holman O'Neill, had stumped from one end of the state to the other, discussing a variety of questions—prohibition, the world court, unemployment, campaign expenditures and other topics.

There were wide differences of opinion among the candidates as to what constituted the major issues of the campaign. Mrs. McCormick, who agreed to abide by the decision on the voters on a prohibition referendum, viewed "business ailments" and the avoidance of foreign alliances as the paramount issues. Lewis contended liquor was the leading question. Mrs. O'Neill, backed by the Anti-Saloon league saw prohibition and unemployment as the leading issues.

The candidates finished their speech-making last night. Mrs. McCormick who among other things has stressed her opposition to the world court, calling it the "back door of the league of nations," told a radio audience today's election will determine "whether we are to have for the next few years in Washington a divided authority between our chief executive and the congress."

Lewis also spoke on the radio asking for repeal of the 18th amendment and the prohibition act, in its place, of state enforcement of the liquor laws.

In her final plea Mrs. O'Neill also mentioned "excessive campaign funds" an important question. Throughout the campaign she had attacked Mrs. McCormick's expenditures in the April primary.

In addition to the senatorial contest the voters had before them the selection of the state's 25 congressmen and the prohibition referendum, involving three questions—repeal of the 18th amendment and the Illinois prohibition act and modification of the Volstead law to permit beverages "which are not in fact intoxicating as determined in accordance with the laws of the respective states," as well as an amendment of the state constitution to permit women to serve on juries.

New York—Harvard, Yale and Princeton all have been beaten at football this season and Michigan has been tied, but they lead in that order in a statistical appraisal of the "intellectual leadership of American colleges and their contributions to the nation," alumni described in "Who's Who in America" total: Harvard 1,374; Yale 937; Princeton 480; Michigan 470.

BANK REVIEW SEES NO DEFINITE TURN IN BUSINESS SLUMP

Expresses Opinion, However, That Depression Must Be Scraping Bottom

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE
Copyright, 1930, By Cons. Press
Wall Street, New York (AP)—The November review of the National City bank issued Monday finds the business situation showing no clear indication of a definite turn during the past month, but expresses the opinion that "there can be little doubt but that the depression in this country is scraping bottom."

The review is a summary of business conditions of 200 corporations that have reported for the third quarter of 1930. These show a decline of 45 per cent, or to about $218,000,000 from over $403,000,000 last year. This brings the nine months decline to 23 per cent, or roughly to $390,000,000.

The 12 industrial groups in which the two hundred corporations are embraced indicate decreases for the quarter ranging from 19 per cent in products to nearly 73 per cent in companies manufacturing automobile accessories. The iron and steel group is off over 61 per cent; automobiles 57.6 per cent, petroleum 57 per cent, machinery 54.6 per cent, tobacco and electrical equipment 33 per cent, chemicals and drugs 29.2 per cent, and miscellaneous over 50 per cent.

FOOD DECLINE SMALLER
The same relative conditions for the 12 groups are shown in the profits for nine months, with the decreases in automobiles and iron and steel being the heaviest in the major industries and that in food products, the smallest.

A table indicating the quarterly profits and the annual rate of return on capital and surplus indicates that this return in the first quarter of 1930 was 10.8 per cent, in the second quarter 11.4 per cent and in the third quarter 8.5 per cent, with an average for the nine months of 10.1 per cent as against 17 per cent in the same period of 1929.

One important development in the way of bringing about permanent improvement in business is noted in the National City bank circular which emphasizes the steps that are now being taken to reduce costs of production. "Under pressure of reduced volume of business and lower prices," it says, "business men have been going over their organizations with a fine tooth comb, subjecting every process to a rigid inspection with a view to finding ways and means of unnecessary expense and saving costs to the irreducible minimum, and the results are, in many cases most impressive."

It is also pointed out that business recessions are not without their values in bringing about a more stable industrial situation. The review finds that there is considerable readjustment in wholesale prices and the decline in the price of raw materials is "assisting revival by tending to offset the reduced purchasing power of large sections of the population. Anyone who doubts this should take a day off and go through the stores to convince himself of the mark-downs that have taken place."

For those who feel that present conditions are more serious than any that have faced this generation and that they give little promise for the future, encouragement is given in the picture presented in the National City review of the world confusion as recently as 1921. This included "Europe exhausted by war and in serious danger of revolution; currencies collapsing; South America and Australia, then as now, acutely affected by the heavy fall in raw material prices; Japan and the world over filled with overflowing with undeliverable American merchandise; banks burdened with protested foreign exchange items; Cuba in moratorium, and in the far east, Japan suffering from the after effects of a panic which proved to be the first warning of the coming storm."

The fairly early sequel of all this was the return to old periods of depression, namely, recovery after a certain period of stagnation which culminated in the stock market panic a year ago, and during which, all classes of American corporations made the largest profits and put by the heaviest surplus reserves, as well as wiped out the greatest amount of debt, in their history.

CANCEL GRID GAME WITH FOND DU LAC

New London Gridders to Meet Merrill on Latter's Field

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—The city football game scheduled here Sunday with Fond du Lac will not be played. Instead the squad will travel to Merrill to play a return game. Both teams are anxious to break the tie existing as a result of the game played here Oct. 19. Fond du Lac's team has undergone considerable change and the new management did not care to play the return game here. However, the Bull Dog fans are assured of a game here Nov. 16. President Allen is endeavoring to secure the Wolverines, and there is some talk of trying to get Shawano here in case the Wolverine game falls through.

The Wolverines have a good record this year, having beaten both Shawano and Clintonville by 6-0 scores. On Wednesday afternoon at 2:45 the high school team will play its last scheduled game of the season, meeting E. De Pere here. Though East is low in the conference standings they have played unusually strong teams this year and have never been overwhelmingly defeated. The De Pere boys always play hard and scrappy with the local squads and this game promises plenty of action. Although New London did not cop first place the Red and Whites are right next to the top of the heap. They have won from Menasha, Clintonville, Neenah and Shawano, besides winning one non-conference game with Marion. Their only set back came at the hands of W. De Pere, which this year has the strongest team in the high school league.

Plans are being made for seating 150 club members and guests at the Congregational church. The dinner will be served by the Ladies Aid society of the church. Milton Stanley will talk. A second feature of interest will be the presence of Dale Russell of Iowa, who has gained notice through the composition of several songs. Russell will sing a number of his songs. An orchestra under the direction of D. O. Bissett of this city will entertain.

Due to the plans for this event no noon day luncheon was held on Monday. MUST TEST COWS FOR BUTTERFAT, FARMERS ADVISED

Can't Select Best Cows in Herd from Appearance,
Experts Point Out

BY W. F. WINSEY

One of the corner stones of successful dairying, according to dairy specialists and farmers who have tried it out, is testing cows for butterfat production. The reason that testing is so important is that no farmer can select the best paying cows in his herd without testing and has no check on the tests on his milk statements. Testing cows for butterfat leads to culling the herd and breeding from cows and sires with records of production. It also leads to improved feeding. Testing cows is so important in dairying that no farmer can do his best without it.

The fact that testing cows is one of the corner stones of economical dairying is vividly illustrated by the testing of two herds in Outagamie county. One of the herds was up to the time he began testing thought he had a good herd and the other thought his herd was below the ordinary.

The testing proved that the herd of 25 cows, considered good by the owner produced an average of only 211.6 pounds of butterfat in a year, and the herd of 12 cows considered only ordinary by the owner produced during the year an average of 403 pounds of butterfat.

With butter at 40 cents per pound, it takes 30 200-pound cows to produce $1,000 worth of butter in a year. The total feed cost of each of the 200 pound cows in such a herd for a year is $48. The value of the product of each cow above the cost of feed is $92. The wages of the dairyman who feeds such a cow is 30 cents per hour.

With butter at 40 cents per pound, it requires only 11 400 pound cows to produce $1,000 worth of butter in a year. The feed cost of a year of each 400 pound cow is $71, the value of her product above the cost of her feed is $89. The wages of her owner who feeds and cares for her is 53 cents per hour.

One of the Outagamie-co dairymen who discovered through testing that his 30 cows were producing only $1,000 worth of butter a year was in a position to start off on the road to get 11 cows that would turn over to him $1,000 a year.

The other Outagamie-co farmer whose 12 cows produced 400 pounds of butterfat each year valued at $1,000 after testing for a year, was in a position to put his cows on their backs and to save them from the butcher and the itinerant cattle buyer.

Such cows as this farmer found he had through testing are worth daily fortunes as the foundation animals of herds.

SUPREME COURT IN

RECESS TO NOV. 24

Grants Limited Review on Commission's Power in Advertising Case

Washington—(P)—The supreme court Monday issued a number of orders refusing or granting reviews and then recessed until Nov. 24.

Before meeting again the members of the court plan to prepare opinions on many, if not all of the 28 cases which have been argued orally since the present term began.

The court announced it would review an appeal by Captain Gynther Storassli, an army officer on the Fort Snelling military reservation, contesting a Minnesota automobile license tax.

The authority of the Federal Trade commission to stop alleged misrepresentation in advertising when no injury to competing firms is involved, will be given a limited review by the supreme court.

The question arose from an order of the commission that the Haledam company refrain from advertising "Marmola," a patent anti-fat remedy, as a safe, harmless and scientific method of treating obesity.

It charged the medicine sold under this name contained a powerful drug which should be used only at a physician's direction.

The sixth circuit court of appeals reversed the order of the commission, holding it had no authority since it had failed to show evidence of injury to honest competitors.

The commission in its appeal to the supreme court said in effect its authority would be sharply limited if the circuit court's decision were permitted to stand.

Shiocton—Shiocton high school grain judging team, consisting of Clark Van Stratten, Irwin Hoewisch and Russel Johnson, received honorable mention in the awards at the state agricultural judging contest, Madison, Oct. 9 and 10. Clark Van Stratten was awarded seventh place in grain and seed judging in the contest in which 189 boys assembled from all parts of the state participated.

The animal husbandry class of the high school has taken up the study of feeding animals, and the plant husbandry class has taken up the study of soils. The latter class is discussing the methods of improving the organic matter in the soils.

W. D. Brownson, the Smith-Hughes instructor of the high school, returned from the Bellin Hospital, Green Bay, on Thursday October 23, resumed his class duties on Monday October 27, and presents the appearance of complete recovery.

At a meeting of the business men of this village, Friday evening, the board of education and M. F. Mantley, superintendent of schools, and W. D. Brownson, Smith-Hughes instructor, it was decided to hold the school fair this season the last week in January or the first week in February. The fair which will outstrip all previous events of the kind will be sponsored by the business men. The program is in process of preparation and with the date of the winter fair will soon be announced.

With butter at 40 cents per pound, it takes 30 200-pound cows to produce $1,000 worth of butter in a year. The total feed cost of each of the 200 pound cows in such a herd for a year is $48. The value of the product of each cow above the cost of feed is $92. The wages of the dairyman who feeds such a cow is 30 cents per hour.

With butter at 40 cents per pound, it requires only 11 400 pound cows to produce $1,000 worth of butter in a year. The feed cost of a year of each 400 pound cow is $71, the value of her product above the cost of her feed is $89. The wages of her owner who feeds and cares for her is 53 cents per hour.

One of the Outagamie-co dairymen who discovered through testing that his 30 cows were producing only $1,000 worth of butter a year was in a position to start off on the road to get 11 cows that would turn over to him $1,000 a year.

The other Outagamie-co farmer whose 12 cows produced 400 pounds of butterfat each year valued at $1,000 after testing for a year, was in a position to put his cows on their backs and to save them from the butcher and the itinerant cattle buyer.

Such cows as this farmer found he had through testing are worth daily fortunes as the foundation animals of herds.

Even the higher of those two prices probably does not pay the grower for cutting, trimming and hauling to market to say nothing of the great expense of raising a crop of cabbage. These prices prevailing at harvesting time are very discouraging to growers and especially so now for the reasons that the cabbage crop over the country this fall is short and the consumers are paying the usual prices for kraut and cabbage.

If farmers remember their cabbage price predicament this fall, they will probably think twice before they plunge into raising a large acreage of kraut cabbage next spring. They will hesitate and consider because they have evidence now that they are at the mercy of the cabbage price-fixers, with a field of early cabbage on hand as a crop of early cabbage cannot be stored.

The growers will also go slow in planting large fields of late cabbage unless they have storage capacity for their crops on their farms. With the late crops in storage, the growers may wait for and enjoy after-harvest prices and not forced to accept the cutthroat harvest prices.

Cabbage growers have it in their power, however, to get fair prices for their cabbage each year through their cabbage growers association in Outagamie and Brown counties.

TAKE SAMPLES OF SOILS IN COUNTY

Many Farmers Anxious to Learn Conditions of Their Fields

BY W. F. WINSEY

Believing that a knowledge of the fertility conditions of their fields is one of the pillars of successful farming a number of Outagamie-co farmers invited Gus Sell, county agent, to take samples of their soils and gave him and Paul A. R. Alberts of the College of Agriculture a history of the crops raised on each field. The soil samples will be tested in the soil laboratories of the College of Agriculture next winter and reports and fertilizer recommendations will be sent to the farm owners. The cost of analyzing the soils of a farm is $5 for the first 80 acres and $1 for each additional 40 acres.

The owners of the farms on which the sample collecting has been completed by Sell and Albert are: Jess Lathrop, Guy Blonder, Albert Radice, Leonard Steinberg, Hortonville; Arthur Prelwitz, Robert Bohren, Edward Sawall, Lucas Kaufman, R. R. Griswold, Charles Carpenter, S. G. Ruppel, B. F. Winkler and Marsh Bros., town of Dale; Frank Louden, Ervin Tellock, Geo. Schaefer, Victor Loppa, and Theo. Schmidt, town of Greenville; William Schroeder & Son, George Schroth and John Ort, town of Ellington; Martin Vanden Bosch, town of Grand Chute; Killian Bros., town of Buchanan; John Henke, town of Center; Henry Albert, town of Seymour and Roy Daniels, town of Cicero.

Ten other farmers are on Mr. Sell's list for a complete soil analysis of their farms, but their applications have not yet been received. They are included in the first installment of soil testing work. The testers will serve the latter group within two weeks.

PREFERS FLYING

Hollywood — Al Wilson makes his living by stunt flying. All day long he thrills thousands with his loops, dives, and climbs in the air. And never once has he had a serious accident. And so he prefers flying to being home on firm land. While sound asleep recently he tumbled out of bed and dislocated two vertebrae, which accounts for his preference.

ARMORERS' HAMMERS
CLANGING IN LONDON

London—(P)—Americans now take almost the entire output of London armorers, those expert smiths who still use methods of their fathers to hammer out breastplates, greaves and other pieces that go to make up an iron suit.

Samuel Rex, proprietor of one of the few remaining shops, keeps busy designing special orders for wealthy Americans who desire the outfits of mail, helmets, swords and shields for decorating spacious mansions. Rex has some fine specimens of ancient armor.

"They used great steel in those days," he said as he took down a breastplate dated years ago probably by a harquebus. Several lusty blows of his sledge failed to take the dent out of the armor.

"I could make them as fine as this," he said, "only who would pay such a high price for my time?"

Virginia Dare, born in Jamestown, Va., is said to have been the first white child born in the United States.

MR. WILLIAM JAMES BICE

"I am glad to recommend Konjola for my wife and I have been greatly benefited by it," said Mr. William James Bice, Polk City, Ia., near Des Moines. I took but three bottles of Konjola and my stomach trouble is entirely gone. I am free from attacks of dizziness and am in better health than for years. I only wish I had heard of this medicine years sooner."

La Barba Defeats Kid Chocolate In Ten Rounds

CALIFORNIAN IS WINNER OF FIVE TORRID ROUNDS

Cuban Negro Gets Edge in Three Frames, Two Are Even; 16,000 See Show

NEW YORK (AP)—Regardless of the fact that a fellow Cuban in Connecticut named Battalino holds the official rating as world featherweight champion, a young man from Los Angeles, rugged Fidel La Barba, can justly claim himself the best of the 126-pounders flinging leather today.

La Barba, once a student of Stanford university and before that champion of all the flyweights, proved his right to titular recognition among the featherweights last night by clearly outpointing Kid Chocolate, the Cuban sensation, in a torrid ten round engagement that drew 16,000 persons, the biggest crowd of the indoor season so far, to Madison Square Garden, Chocolate dropped a decision last summer to Jackie D'Amico, foremost challenger for the lightweight title after winning a decision from Al Singer, present 135 pound king, about 18 months ago.

La Barba, however, was the first time Chocolate has ever been beaten by a man in his own class, the featherweight division.

By the victory La Barba reversed a decision, that went against him in his first match with Chocolate here two years ago. Last night, having learned apparently by the previous engagement, Fidel kept up an everlastingly bombardment of the Negro's body with left hooks that buried deep under the smiling "Kid" slapping him. He fought back in his own class, however, was the first time Chocolate has ever been beaten by a man in his own class, the featherweight division.

VIKE, ORANGE GRID TEAMS BACK TO WORK

Lawrence Invades Beloit This Week, High School Meets Oshkosh

Appleton's contribution to the football wars, the Lawrence college and high school teams, resumed practice sessions Monday evening for their next games. The college eleven will travel again Saturday, taking a jaunt down state to meet Beloit college at Beloit. The high school shows on the home field with Oshkosh the opponent.

Both Appleton teams were defeated Saturday, but in the case of the high school the defeat had a bit of credit about it. Holding the fast traveling Manitowoc eleven to a 12 and 0 score shows the Orange has improved defensively at least. However, there were times when the sound eleven showed very well offensively and had it been against some team other than Manitowoc, probably would have scored.

Just what Eddie Kotal will do with his Lawrence eleven this week is a question. The Vikings made 36 yards rushing the ball last Saturday compared to something like 200 for Ripon. A couple passes gave Lawrence a few more yards but all in all the game showed the Vikes haven't an attack. Beloit is about in the same boat, according to reports from down state and the two elevens probably will go into the game even up.

BILL MITCHELL DRAWS 30 DAY SUSPENSION

Milwaukee (AP)—Billy Mitchell and the Antlers fight club today were under suspension of 30 days each for alleged contract irregularities in connection with the recent Tommy Loughran-Dave Maier fight here.

The commissioner said it suspended the fight manager and the club because it found evidence of two contracts with the fighters, one of which was not listed with the commission. The contract filed with the commission called for the fight on a percentage basis, the commission said, while the fighters were paid according to another agreement by which Loughran received a $3,500 purse. The commission said it would also write Loughran and his manager to cite them to show cause why they should not be suspended also.

8,500 MICHIGAN FANS TO SEE HARVARD GAME

Ann Arbor (AP)—The University of Michigan football team will be supported by a 100-piece band and 8,500 rooters in the Harvard game at Cambridge Saturday. Two special trains have been ordered to carry the squad, band, students and alumni from Ann Arbor.

A Michigan alumni banquet and dance will be held in Boston the night before the game. Speakers at the dinner will include Governor Allen of Massachusetts; Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan; Fielding H. Yost, athletic director and Justice Robert Thompson of the New York supreme court.

Michigan's allotment of 8,500 tickets for the game has been sold.

Badgers Heaviest Scorers, Defensive Champs Of Big 10

MADISON (AP)—A Western conference caprice is to find one of its beaten and led teams in the roll of both scoring leader and defensive champion. Such is the case this fall, and the University of Wisconsin football team is the party, to wit:

Scoring leader of the Midwest with 148 points, 11 more than Northwestern.

Defensive leader with 13 points scored against it, seven by a conference

DAGGER by Mary Dahlberg

SYNOPSIS: Dagger Marley, 16-year-old niece of a Texas rancher near the Mexican border, rescues Blame Howard, an American vagabond soldier of fortune, from a band of Mexican insurgents. It develops that Howard was once a famous polo player, as was Dick Welling, now crippled by loss of an arm, a love man on the ranch of Daggers' uncle Jim Marley. Howard and Welling have heard of each other, but both seem to have some bitter memory of which they do not wish to speak. Howard lingers at the ranch and beats Dagger at polo, tiding an even gambling, thereby winning her respect and admiration.

Chapter 4
TEXAS MOONLIGHT
WALL, I hear there was a big game last night," Jim Marley drawled at the breakfast table.

Dagger was unabashed. "That's right, darling," she agreed. "I was taken into camp. But I came out with my roll, anyway." "You pushed your luck too far," said Howard, but don't worry, you're a first class gambler." "A hell of a recommendation that is," grumbled Jim Marley.

"I suspect Howard means she is a good sport," said Welling, "and mighty few women deserve to have that said of them." "Nonsense," cried Dagger, throwing down her napkin. She led the way out to the porch, with her chin lifted. Juanito, the odd-job boy, extended a yellow envelope to Howard. He opened it. "Bad news," Dagger asked. "No, just a line from—my wife." It seemed to her that he choked somewhat on that last word. "Oh! Does she want you—to come home?" "Not especially. You see, Dagger Emily's mother—damn her!—decided we were suited to each other and she fooled the pair of us."

"Well, if I ever married a man I'd do it with my eyes open, and because I loved him!" Dagger positively snorted, then suddenly became contrite. "I'm sorry, I reckon it's none of my business." "On the contrary, my dear," he denied, "I'd like to think my happiness was your business."

"Anyway, I don't blame you and Dick for saying women aren't good sports. Some of us are, but if you two met the wrong kind—" "What happened to Welling?" he cut her off. "I don't know," she confessed. "I know he was unhappy when he came here, but that's all." "He must have had a bad bump," Howard reflected. "Emily knew him, but she never talked to him."

Dagger peered quickly at his face, then looked away, her lips quivering. "How long since you've seen your wife?" "Must be close to a year. After I said goodbye to her, I decided to take what I call a pilgrimage." "Yes?" she prompted. "Where?" "Around the world. I went to see four men, the four friends whose thoughts meant most to me. I figured I'd take my doubts to them, get their reactions. Raoul de Senac—he was the first. He's Duc de Pontois, and he has Charlemagne's blood in his veins. Believes in the responsibility of the well-born. And Sidi Marut, a Protestant Mussulman, a merchant who is almost a saint. And Ghulam Buk, who is abbot of a Buddhist monastery in Lahore, and has conquered passion and hate. And Chav-Kar Sho, the greatest man in China—who rose from banditry to govern a province."

ILLINOIS VOTERS MAY ELECT FIRST FEMALE SENATOR

Race Between Ruth M'Cormick, Colonel Lewis Draws National Attention

BY OWEN L. SCOTT
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
Chicago — For the first time in the country's history, voters Tuesday went to the polls to decide whether or not to send a woman to the United States senate.

Never before has a major party offered as its candidate in the general election, a feminine aspirant for the upper house of the national legislature. That accounts for the unusual interest which centers in the outcome of the race which terminates at the polls today.

Ruth Hanna McCormick, the Republican nominee, already has broken a record by crushing a veteran masculine politician, Senator Charles S. Deneen, in the primary—the first woman to accomplish a political task of that magnitude.

Her opponent, James Hamilton Lewis, likewise has an almost equally impressive record as the first Democrat who has served in the senate from Illinois since the days of John M. Palmer back in 1891.

Former Senator Lewis, who served as Democratic whip for President Woodrow Wilson, was elected by the Illinois legislature during the time of the bull moose split from the Republican party in 1912. He was defeated in 1918 by Medill McCormick, the late husband of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick.

HINGE ON PROHIBITION
The third senatorial candidate, Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, running as an independent dry, was the first woman legislator ever to serve in Illinois.

Her candidacy is important largely for the effect it may have on the fate of Mrs. McCormick. Issues of the campaign have revolved almost solely around the question of prohibition and the business situation.

An attempt was made to remove the prohibition issue from the personal clash between the candidates by a state-wide referendum on three questions: first, whether the eighth amendment should be repealed; second, whether the Volstead act should be modified; and, third, whether the state enforcement law should be repealed.

Mrs. McCormick has told her audiences that she personally, publicly and privately was bone dry, but that as a believer in majority rule she would abide by the voters' wishes. Colonel Lewis has branded the referendum as a delusion and a snare, and has campaigned as a dripping wet, in favor of repeal of the Volstead act to permit states to determine the alcoholic content of beverages.

Mrs. O'Neill is a bone dry, backed by the Anti-Saloon league.

On the economic issue, Mrs. McCormick has supported President Hoover and appealed for the voters' support in order to uphold his hand in the measures instituted to bring a return to normal.

CHARGES BUNGLING
Colonel Lewis has accused the Republican administration of bungling on the tariff and of syphoning wealth from the middle west in order to create an artificial inflation that provided an appearance of prosperity while the ground-work was being laid for a crash.

Normally Illinois is Republican by an overwhelming majority. It is expected that today approximately 2,100,000 votes would be cast, about 1,000,000 of them in Cook-co and 1,100,000 downstate. The last off-year election was in 1926 and presented a situation somewhat similar to the present. At that time Col. Frank L. Smith, Republican, polled $42,773 votes, George Brennan 774,949 and Hugh Magill, independent Republican 156,245.

Smith carried downstate by 149,538 and Brennan carried Cook-co, in which Chicago is located, by 82,208, leaving a plurality of 76,330 for Smith after 149,536 votes had been taken by Magill.

It is conceded that during the present election the Republicans will have to come to Chicago with at least a 100,000 plurality or they will be defeated by the wet Chicago vote. That raises the question of whether the business situation and prohibition will make Democrats out of a large number of normally Republican downstate voters. Each side has its own ideas on that.

On his deathbed last week, William Kingsford-Smith, father of the aviator, expressed a wish that his ashes be cast to the winds over the Pacific and his famous son thus today performed his last sad duty to his dead father.

SEVERE SLASHING SHOWN IN GERMAN BUDGET ESTIMATES

Almost Every Item Shows Effect of Bruening's Rigid Economy

Berlin —(P)— Chancellor Bruening sent to the Reichsrat, or German federal council today for its consideration budget estimates for 1931 embodying the financial reforms for which the government has fought tooth and nail during the past few months.

Pruning and clearing knives have been wielded on almost every item listed in the new budget, which strikes a balance of income and outgo at 10,400,000,000 marks (about $2,496,000,000) and lists besides "extraordinary" estimates of 237,773,000 marks (about $57,065,520).

A considerable amount has been chopped from the former totals by slashing of salaries, beginning at the top where President Paul von Hindenburg has accepted a decrease of 20 per cent to $8,000 marks a year plus 120,000 marks "representation" allowances. Deputies salaries are cut also.

Reductions in the army and navy staffs total 7,000,000 marks. The navy estimates include the first installment of 10,830,000 marks for the new armored cruiser, Ersatz Lothringen, and 4,400,000 for smaller craft, and 1,000,000 marks for anti-aircraft defense. These non-recurring expenses total 2,800,000 marks higher than in 1930.

Appropriation is made for a cenotaph in honor of German war dead. The edifice would be constructed near the famous Brandenburg gate, Berlin, at a cost of 155,000 marks. German receipts and expenditures according to the 1931 budget will be 1,422,000,000 marks (about $341,000,000) less than in 1930, when the total estimates were 12,079,000,000 marks (about 2,898,000,000). This year's estimates, including "extraordinary" provide for 10,556,000,000 (about $2,577,000,000).

With two exceptions all ministers and departments must make drastic cuts. The ministry of justice budget allowance has been increased by 706,050 marks to 15,374,000 marks because of expenses in the patent office, and the food ministry has been allowed 243,150 marks more to make a total of 9,691,650,000 marks.

These two increases are mere drops in the bucket as compared with the huge savings projected elsewhere.

Technical life, and a brief picture of its technical development, will be outlined by Frederick Rodgers during a broadcast over WTMJ and the NBC stations at 9 p. m.

Myles Graney, Marquette university quarterback on the team that returned victorious over Boston college, and Francis Deis, battering fullback, tonight will give a radio football interview over WILAD Marquette university station, at 7:45.

MONEY SPENT IN TRAVEL, SPORTS DESPITE SLUMP

Outdoor Amusement Season Closes With Fine Record of Profits

BY J. C. ROYLE
(Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press)

Washington —(CPA)— Now that the outdoor amusement season is drawing to a close, it is becoming more evident than ever that the present depression of business is due to a psychological state of mind. The past eight months has perhaps been one of the greatest amusement seasons the country has ever known. The public has had money to spend on travel and recreation, and has spent it despite the slump in business which has resulted from the check to buying in various other lines.

This would seem to indicate, economists in government service declare that so far there has been little acute distress. There has been anxiety and uneasiness of mind, however, and they credit some part of the expenditures of many people for recreation to the desire to "take their minds off their troubles." They point out that in Great Britain it was in the terrible depression following the war in which the extraordinary vogue for "mystery thrillers," detective stories and plays reached its height.

The totals are startling. The reports show that nearly 90,000 Americans traveling in Europe returned in the last month. This is 20,000 more than returned in the similar period of 1929. Passage money alone represents a tremendous sum, to say nothing of the amounts spent abroad, which probably will exceed $300,000,000 before the year ends. Travel to Canada was only slightly reduced, while trips taken to Mexico showed a slight increase.

In the year ended Sept. 30, when the season for many of the national parks closed there were 2,318,615 visitors to these national playgrounds. This was a gain of 138,021 over the previous year, which was regarded as one of the most prosperous in the country's history.

Throughout the year the motion picture theatres were well patronized and distress among the companies engaged in that business was due to other causes than lack of patronage. The National and American Baseball leagues had a remarkable season, with home crops to be played at turnstiles clicking. This was due in part to the closeness of the pennant races, but not entirely. The race tracks have been more than well patronized and the consumption of gasoline by motor boats reached a new high record.

DISTRESS NOT ACUTE

The attendance at football games this fall has shown no indication of a let down even for the contests for which tickets range in price from $3 to $5. At the major games played on Nov. 1 a conservative estimate places the expenditures of those who attended at $2,500,000 and the season has not yet reached its peak.

Hundreds of millions of dollars has been spent in the last 10 months on golf and miniature golf. Galleries at major tournaments where a charge was made were the largest ever known.

These facts are taken by economists to indicate that while the general public may be worried anxious and uneasy, acute distress is lacking. There is tremendous unemployment and some of the volume or amusement seekers is no doubt due to the fact that many had idle time. Reports from the various states to Colonel Woods' emergency unemployment committee however indicate that acute want up until now has been confined to a relatively small proportion of those out of work.

Flashes of Life

New York—Girls at Barnard college have been studying intensely why the treader appeals to the scowler. Sidney Franklin, flatbush bullfighter, who stars in Spain, made a speech to them, wearing a flowered cape and other regalia. One girl asked if Spauldnars threw things into the arena to express disapproval. "Well," replied Sidney, "they are not bashful in any way."

New York—There's a $500 bunch of grapes in town. It comes from Brussels, where it was insured for that sum while growing in a hot-house. The bunch, which weighs 30 pounds, will be exhibited at a flower show. Until then it will be in cold storage.

Washington—Motorists paid $250,600,455 in taxes for the gas they stepped on the first six months this year.

DEAN SUSPENDS 42 PRINCETON STUDENTS

Says Conduct During Riot Worse Than That of Reds or Gangsters

Princeton, N. J. —(P)— Their conduct described by the dean as being beneath that of the worst of the underworld, 42 Princeton university undergraduates have been suspended for participating in a riot last Wednesday.

The names of those suspended were not given out by Dean Christian Gauss. Four were dropped for a year; two until the end of the Christmas vacation, five for one month; three for two weeks, fourteen for one week and fourteen for an indefinite period.

The riot was an aftermath of a football rally designed to arouse enthusiasm for the Princeton-Chicago game last Saturday which ended in a scoreless tie.

After the rally the students rushed into Nassau, blocked traffic by pushing parked cars into the middle of the roadway, wrecked a theatre ticket booth, rocked buses, turned on fire hydrants and ended by pulling the statue of "the Christian Student" from its pedestal and dragging it through the street.

Some of these acts were worse than lawless," said Dean Gauss. "They were also in the highest degree ungentelemanly. It is doubtful whether reds or gangsters would have engaged in some of them. It is the first time I have ever had to feel thoroughly ashamed of a group of Princeton men."

Chapter 4
TEXAS MOONLIGHT
W AALL, I hear there was a big game last night," Jim Marley drawled at the breakfast table.

"How long since you've seen your wife?"
"Must be close to a year. After I said goodbye to her, I decided to take what I call a pilgrimage."
"Yes?" she prompted. "Where?"
"Around the world. I went to see four men, the four friends whose thoughts meant most to me. I figured I'd take my doubts to them, get their reactions. Raoul de Senac—he was the first. He's Duc de Pontois, and he has Charlemagne's blood in his veins. Believes in the responsibility of the well-born. And Sid Marut, a Protestant Musselman, a merchant who is almost a saint. And Ghulam Buk, who is abbot of a Buddhist monastery in Lahore, and has conquered passion and hate. And Chao Kai Sho, the greatest man in China—who rose from banditry to govern a province?"
"And what did they say?"
"Raoul I found in Paris on wound leave. For what one believes, one fights," he said. Sid Marut was acting as an intermediary between the German gun-runners and the desert tribes. "This is an illusion," he said. "We Musselman shall never cleanse our heresies by fighting the Christians' quarrels. Be sure of Allah's will, then kiss the sword of the spirit." Ghulam Buk only smiled when I laid my troubles before him. It is an error, my friend," he said. "One who slays but slays himself. Wrath is sin. Chang was up north in China. What can you win by fighting?" he asked me. "A province? A woman? Fortune? Power? Stay with me, and you shall have all four."
"But they all meant the same thing," Dagger exclaimed. "You should do what you believe in."
"Exactly," assented Howard. "I came to believe that I should join the Allies. I don't see any other thing to do."

The sombreness in his voice oppressed her.
"But at least you're doing things, risking a great stake for—a great cause!"
"I have no stake worth mentioning," he countered.
"I'd call your life the greatest stake you possessed," she said softly, and her arm timidly settled on his arm. Then her mood changed.
"Shall we gallop a while? I'd love to go forever with the wind blowing around me, faster and faster—the pleasure of Dagger's companionship helped influence Howard to stretch his stay at Casa Blanca into three weeks. The warmth of her admiration heartened him, and her eagerness to learn a stimulant to his own faded senses. He accepted her homage with good-natured condescension. But he failed to perceive that before his eyes was happening one of the oldest of human miracles, the chrysalis of the child blossoming into the flower of womanhood.

So Dagger walked her path unwarned, unguarded, blithely happy in the experience. The sharp point of desire was still embedded in the tender matrix of the blossom that crept so slowly, so gradually, from the fading chrysalis. But emerge it must. And, of course, the moment of emergence came with tragical suddenness to both of them.
The weather had turned very hot, so they took their rides in the cool of the evening, returning by starlight. This evening they had ridden the twisting channel of the Rio Grande, and quite by chance they came to the scene of their first meeting.
"I remember I was awfully dirty," said Howard. "Hungry, too."
"I was mad," said Dagger.
"And I was sure they were going to get me," he continued, "but I didn't care."
"And I was sure they weren't going to," she retorted. "What a dreadful thing to say!"
"More dreadful to feel," he answered gruffly.
"But you don't feel that way now?"
"No—not now."
Dagger's mount, Desmond always skittish, started at a mesquite bush that rattled in the breeze. He lurched up against Howard's horse, and the New Yorker instinctively reached out an arm to steady Dagger. As instinctively, she nestled into the crook of his elbow.

Race Between Ruth McCormick, Colonel Lewis Draws National Attention

Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
Chicago — For the first time in the country's history, voters Tuesday went to the polls to decide whether or not to send a woman to the United States senate.

Never before has a major party offered as its candidate in the general election, a feminine aspirant for the upper house of the national legislature. That accounts for the unusual interest which centers in the outcome of the race which terminates at the polls today.

Ruth Hanna McCormick, the Republican nominee, already has broken a record by crushing a veteran masculine politician, Senator Charles S. Deneen, in the primary—the first woman to accomplish a political task of that magnitude.

Her opponent, James Hamilton Lewis, likewise has an almost equally impressive record as the first Democrat who has served in the senate from Illinois since the days of John A. Palmer back in 1881. Former Senator Lewis, who served as Democratic whip for President Woodrow Wilson, was elected by the Illinois legislature during the time of the bull moose split from the Republican party in 1912. He was defeated in 1918 by Medill McCormick, the late husband of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick.

HINGE ON PROHIBITION
The third senatorial candidate, Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, running as an independent, was the first woman legislator ever to serve in Illinois. Her candidacy is important largely for the effect it may have on the fate of Mrs. McCormick.

Issues of the campaign have revolved almost solely around the question of prohibition and the business situation.

An attempt was made to remove the prohibition issue from the personal clash between the candidates by a state-wide referendum on three questions: first, whether the eighteenth amendment should be repealed; second, whether the Volstead act should be modified, and third, whether the state enforcement law should be repealed.

Mrs. McCormick has told her audiences that she personally, publicly and privately was bone dry, but that as a believer in majority rule she would abide by the voters' wishes. Colonel Lewis has branded the referendum as a delusion and a snare, and has campaigned as a dripping wet, in favor of repeal of the eighteenth amendment and alteration of the Volstead act to permit states to determine the alcoholic content of beverages. Mrs. O'Neill is a bone dry, backed by the Anti-Saloon league.

CHARGES BUNGLING
Colonel Lewis has accused the Republican administration of bungling on the tariff and of syphoning wealth from the middle west in order to create an artificial inflation that provided an appearance of prosperity while the ground-work was being laid for a crash.

Normally Illinois is Republican by an overwhelming majority. It is expected that today approximately 2,100,000 votes would be cast, about 1,600,000 of them in Cook-co and 1,100,000 downstate. The last off-year election was in 1926 and presented a situation somewhat similar to the present. At that time Col. Frank L. Smith, Republican, polled 842,273 votes, George Brennan 774,843 and Hugh Magill, independent Republican 156,245. Smith carried downstate by 149,536 and Brennan carried Cook-co, in which Chicago is located, by 82,206, leaving a plurality of 76,330 for Smith after 149,536 votes had been taken by Magill.

It is conceded that during the present election the Republicans will have to come to Chicago with at least a 100,000 plurality or they will be defeated by the wet Chicago vote. That raises the question of whether the business situation and prohibition will make Democrats out of a large number of normally Republican downstate voters. Each side has its own ideas on that.

SEVERE SLASHING SHOWN IN GERMAN BUDGET ESTIMATES

Almost Every Item Shows Effect of Bruening's Rigid Economy

Berlin — (P) — Chancellor Bruening sent to the Reichstag, or German federal council today for its consideration budget estimates for 1931 embodying the financial reforms for which the government has fought tooth and nail during the past few months.

Pruning and cleaving knives have been wielded on almost every item listed in the new budget, which strikes a balance of income and outgo at 10,400,000,000 marks (about $2,496,000,000) and lists besides "extraordinary" estimates of 237,773,000 marks (about $57,065,520).

A considerable amount has been chopped from the former totals by slashing of salaries, beginning at the top where President Paul von Hindenburg has accepted a decrease of 20 per cent to 48,000 marks a year plus 120,000 marks "representation" allowances. Deputies salaries are cut also.

Reductions in the army and navy staffs total 7,000,000 marks. The navy estimates include the first installment of 10,880,000 marks for the new armored cruiser Ersatz Lothringen and 4,400,000 for smaller craft, and 1,000,000 marks for anti-aircraft defense. These non-recurring expenses total 2,800,000 marks higher than in 1930.

Appropriation is made for a cenotaph in honor of German war dead. The edifice would be constructed near the famous Brandenburg gate, Berlin, at a cost of 155,000 marks. German's receipts and expenditures according to the 1931 budget will be 1,423,000,000 marks (about $341,000,000) less than in 1930, when the total estimates were 12,079,000,000 marks (about 2,898,000,000). This year's estimates, including "extraordinary" provide for 10,656,000,000 (about $2,577,000,000).

With two exceptions all ministers and departments must make drastic cuts. The ministry of justice budget allowance has been increased by 706,050 marks to 15,874,000 marks because of expenses in the patent office, and the food ministry has been allowed 243,150 marks more to make a total of 9,691,650 marks. These two increases are mere drops in the bucket as compared with the huge savings projected elsewhere. The largest slash is in the labor ministry, where 402,000,000 marks are to be saved by reducing unemployment doles and social insurance so that expenditures will be 1,041,000,000 in 1931 as compared with 1,443,000,000 in 1930.

Another large slash is in the defense ministry, where estimates were reduced from 621,000,000 marks last year to 539,000,000 marks this year.

IMPRISON EX-MAYOR'S WIFE
New Delhi, India — (P) — Mrs. J. M. Sen Gupta, the formerly Nellie Grey, English wife of a former Mayor of Calcutta, was sentenced to four months simple imprisonment today. She was arrested last week with other congress volunteers as members of a group holding a meeting in defiance of a decree against public assembly.

Mrs. Raj Rani was sentenced to two months simple imprisonment and 25 gurkhas were sentenced to six months rigorous imprisonment on a charge of being members of an unlawful association.

Myles Graney, Marquette university quarterback on the team that returned victorious over Boston college, and Francis Deig, battering fullback, tonight will give a radio football interview over WHAD Marquette university station, at 7:45.

MONEY SPENT IN TRAVEL, SPORTS DESPITE SLUMP

Outdoor Amusement Season Closes With Fine Record of Profits

BY J. L. ROYLE
(Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press)

Washington — (CPA) — Now that the outdoor amusement season is drawing to a close, it is becoming more evident than ever that the present depression of business is due to a psychological state of mind. The past eight months has perhaps been one of the greatest amusement seasons the country has ever known. The public has had money to spend on travel and recreation, and has spent it despite the slump in business which has resulted from the check to buying in various other lines.

This would seem to indicate, economists in government service believe that so far there has been little acute distress. There has been anxiety and uneasiness of mind, however, and they credit some part of the expenditures of many people for recreation to the desire to "take their minds off their troubles." They point out that in Great Britain it was in the terrible depression following the war in which the extraordinary vogue for "mystery thrillers," detective stories and plays reached its height.

The totals are startling. The reports show that nearly 50,000 Americans traveling in Europe returned in the last month. This is 20,000 more than returned in the similar period of 1929. Passage money alone represents a tremendous sum, to say nothing of the amounts spent abroad, which probably will exceed $300,000,000 before the year ends. Travel to Canada was only slightly reduced, while trips taken to Mexico showed a slight increase.

In the year ended Sept. 30, when the season for many of the national parks closed there were 2,318,618 visitors to these national playgrounds. This was a gain of 138,021 over the previous year, which was regarded as one of the most prosperous in the country's history. Throughout the year the motion picture theatres were well patronized and distress among the companies engaged in that business was due to other causes than lack of patronage. The National and American Baseball leagues had a remarkable season, with high crowd figures, the turnstiles clicking. This was due in part to the closeness of the pennant races, but not entirely. The race tracks have been more than well patronized and the consumption of gasoline by motor boats reached a new high record.

DISTRESS NOT ACUTE

The attendance at football games this fall has shown no indication of a let down even for the contests for which tickets range in price from $3 to $5. At the major games played on Nov. 1 a conservative estimate places the expenditures of those who attended at $2,500,000 and the season has not yet reached its peak. Hundreds of millions of dollars has been spent in the last 10 months on golf and miniature golf. Galleries at major tournaments where a charge was made were the largest ever known.

These facts are taken by economists to indicate that while the general public may be worried about unemployment, acute distress is lacking. There is tremendous unemployment and some of the volume or amusement seekers is no doubt due to the fact that many had idle time. Reports from the various states to Colonel Woods' emergency unemployment committee however indicate that acute want up until now has been confined to a relatively small proportion of those out of work.

Flashes of Life

New York—Girls at Barnard college have been studying intensively why the toreador appeals to the scoundrel. Sidney Franklin, flutist-buffetier, who stars in Spain, made a speech to them, wearing a flowered cape and other regalia. One girl asked if Spinaldus threw things into the arena to express disapproval. "Well," replied Sidney, "they are not bashful in any way."

New York—There's a $500 bunch of grapes in town. It comes from Russia, where it was insured for that sum while growing in a hot-house. The bunch, which weighs 30 pounds, will be exhibited at a flower show. Until then it will be in cold storage.

Washington—Motorists paid $230,455 in taxes for the gas they stepped on the first six months this year.

DEAN SUSPENDS 42 PRINCETON STUDENTS

Says Conduct During Riot Worse Than That of Reds or Gangsters

Princeton, N. J. — (P) — Their conduct described by the dean as being beneath that of the lowest of the low, 42 Princeton university undergraduates have been suspended for participating in a riot last Wednesday.

The names of those suspended were not given out by Dean Christian Gauss. Four were dropped for a year; two until the end of the Christmas vacation; five for one month, three for two weeks; fourteen for one week and fourteen for an indefinite period.

The riot was in attendance at a football rally designed to arouse enthusiasm for the Princeton-Chicago game last Saturday which ended in a scoreless tie.

After the rally the students rushed into Nassau-st, blocked traffic by pushing parked cars into the middle of the roadway, wrecked a three-tire truck booth, rocketed buses, turned on fire hydrants and ended by pulling the statue of "the Christian Student" from its pedestal and dragging it through the street.

Some of these acts were worse than lawless," said Dean Gauss. "They were also in the highest degree ungentlemanly. It is doubtful whether the reds or gangsters would have engaged in some of them."

"It is the first time I have ever had to feel thoroughly ashamed of a group of Princeton men."

ITALY'S ARMISTICE DAY

INTEREST ON CATTLE MART MOVES UPWARD

Report Brisk Trading— Prices Show Marked Rally at Opening

Chicago—(AP)—An active opening hog trade, with all interests buying, raised the price of all classes of butchers 10c above the average yesterday and in some the advance was even more. Smooth lightweight packing hogs sold at $8.85 and the rest of heavier animals were $8.25 to $8.65, showing a 15c to 25c gain. Medium and strong weight butchers hogs and first cull, and 500 lb weights sold at $8.40 which was 5c above the top yesterday. Improved shipping demand, which was so curtailed last week, accounted for most of the strength today, although there was also a shrinkage of 11,000 head in the total at the eleven markets, compared to last Tuesday.

Forced activity lent an appearance of strength to the early cattle trade today, as the run of finished cattle was too small to allow buyers any choice. Top readings were held at better than $13.00, and were much in demand, but heavy steers lacked support, at $10.00 to $11.00. Included in the supply were 2,500 westerns, leaving only 5,500 natives to be sold. The stock was steady in a rather unstable opening. Demand for dressed beef locally and in the east was still dull, which acted as a dead weight on the trade today.

Another 30 per cent cut in lamb receipts, compared to last Tuesday, saved the market in the opening hours today from a weaker start. All were steady with the day before, at around $8.00 for better grades of native ewe and wether lambs. Shippers were inactive, but packers indicated a willingness to buy at prevailing prices.

Grain Notes

Chicago—(AP)—Prices of grains on the Chicago Board of Trade continued to decline Monday in the face of persistent liquidation of scattered longs who bought recently because they thought prices were low enough. The release of holdings in wheat has uncovered many stop loss orders, showing general lack of confidence in the ability of the market to show strength. The inside on December wheat touched the lowest since 1926. This occurred in the face of the smallest crop in 29 years and a total available supply less than the average of the last ten years. There was utter lack of disposition to rally, and the close came within a fraction of the bottom.

Trading was light, reflecting general inactivity and low prices in all foreign markets. No attention was paid to reports of Argentina rust, a decrease in the corn visible supply, and news from Canada telling of a substantial loss in the harvest.

Corn closed lower, mostly in sympathy with wheat; but added to this was the favorable husking weather, a decline in the spot basis and general tendency to liquidate. Buying to cover shorts was the bulk of the support.

Longest Taxi Service

Established In Africa

Washington, D. C.—The world's longest taxi service has been established in Africa.

It runs from Juba at the head of navigation on the Nile to Cape Town at the southern tip of the continent, a distance of more than 5,000 miles. The Trans-African Motor Safaris, as it is called, schedules the trip as a 60-day journey although road conditions may diminish or extend the transit time.

COVERED IN 40 DAYS

"Africa's new auto service down the continent's backbone uses the southern two-thirds of an 8,000-mile Cape-to-Cairo route which has been pioneered by a few daring tourists," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C. "A young South African and his wife covered the trail in 40 days, driving the entire distance, except for 1,000 miles of impassable Sudd morass, through which they ferried on a Nile steamer."

THROUGH AL FRESCO ZOO

"African chauffeurs skid their cars over big snakes in their path to be sure of killing the reptiles. In Tanganyika and Kenya the route leads through an outdoor zoo, vast game preserve plains, thornbush, and thousands of African animals; elephants, giraffes, antelopes, zebras, ostriches, crocodiles, hyenas, hartebeest, and jackals. Unfaded of automobiles, herd grazes peacefully while cars run close by their unfenced feeding grounds."

SALE OF GOLD COINS

"Salt and gold coins should have their place in the luggage of every motor traveler through Africa: salt to get out of ruts, gold coins to while away stop-overs. Even such a village as Kasama, merely a jungle crossroads, populated by a handful of whites, has its gold course. The fair is held in Kasama, where 600 antelope horns hang from foot-stool size to young hills substitute for bunkers."

WHEN THE WHEELS SPIN

"When the wheels spin and sink in the mud it is time to call for native help. Naked men, women and children will flock to aid the unfortunate motorist. With shouts and chants they will pull out a car. They will chop down trees and bushes to make a corduroy road over a wet spot. When the labor is over no reward pleases them more than a teaspoonful of salt."

FIRST ATTEMPT FOILED

"Africa's swift development has been dramatized by successive attempts to shorten the time between Cairo and Cape Town. The trek was first accomplished in 1898 by Grogan, who traveled on foot with a small army of native porters. In 1913 the first attempt to go through by automobile failed when Captain Kelley was killed by a leopard. Colonel van Rynveldt flew the route in 1920, although two machines were wrecked before he reached Cape Town. Surveys now are under way for regular air service."

AIRPLANES AND AUTOMOBILES TOGETHER

are making Cecil Rhodes' dream of an all-road route through Africa an accomplished fact years before he or any of his disciples expected. Swift through transit could be established. He prophesied the day when trains would run from Cape Town to Cairo; it now seems probable that surfaced roads and air stations will substitute for Rhodes' steel rails.

JEFFERSON-CO BANKS PREPARE FOR ROBBERS

Jefferson, Wis.—(AP)—Jefferson banks are taking no chances on a repetition of the $500,000 robbery which befell one of their number last year.

Two of the institutions have installed guards and new equipment warranted to repel even the stoutest robbers.

The Bank of Helenville has everything from steel guard-plates before the cashiers' cages, and a 12-foot spiked "fence" to loopholes in the tellers' windows, through which defense guns may be poked. Not even a ricocheting bullet could reach employees.

The Bank of Jefferson, not far from the Farmers and Merchants' bank, which was robbed last year, has transformed a lounge into a guard-room where a man sits on duty all the time, gun in hand and tear-gas at his side.

THEEE DIE WHEN TWO CARS CRASH INTO TRUCK

Rockford, Ill.—(AP)—Three men were dead here today, the result of two automobiles crashing into a stalled truck on a road near here.

A roadster driven by Morris Sharp, 18, Beloit, Wis., hit the truck first. The car veered into a ditch and overturned, pinning Sharp underneath the wreckage. Joseph Schullman, 50, driver of the truck, ran to aid Sharp and was struck by a car driven by Joseph Lavinsky 43, Rockford, that smashed into the truck from the opposite direction and careened into the wreckage. All of the men were fatally injured.

MAN HELD AS DRIVER IN FATAL ACCIDENT

Elkhart, Ind.—(AP)—Harry Richmond, 20, of Elkhart, was held today for questioning in connection with the death of 19-year-old Dorothy Winters who died yesterday shortly after she was found lying along a road west of here.

Police said Richmond admitted his car struck something while he was driving along the road where the girl was found. A piece of cloth that matched the girl's coat was found on a fender of Richmond's car, officers said.

The girl's body was identified yesterday by Ray E. Nelson, 30, of Elkhart, who admitted he had accompanied her to a roadhouse. He said she left the resort with another escort.

AQUITANIA DELAYED BY GALE AND HEAVY SEAS

S. S. Aquitania (By Radio to the Associated Press)—Mountainous seas and a terrific gale which have delayed the Aquitania since a few hours after it sailed from Cherbourg Saturday were climaxed this morning when the gale reached a hurricane force of a hundred miles an hour.

Officers of the ship said it was one of the worst storms in years. The ship almost heaved to at the height of the gale, slowing down to a bare three knots an hour. The vessel was already 18 hours behind schedule. It was to have reached New York next Friday.

RAILROAD FIRM ASKS TO FLOAT DEBENTURE

Washington—(AP)—Permission to issue and sell $5,000,000 in 5 per cent debentures was asked to the Interstate Commerce commission today by the Western Pacific railroad. The road proposes to use the funds to forward its extension in northern California. In this profit it is co-operating with the Great Northern to bring a new transcontinental service into the San Francisco Bay area.

BY DIANA MERWIN (Associated Press Fashion Editor)

Paris—(AP)—The next style war to turn around to the prognosticators, is going to be a silk worm who will spin some clothes on women's backs for evening hours.

Dressmakers have admittedly gone as far as they can go in the designing of backless evening dresses. The fashions of the future must necessarily be a step in the other direction.

SHOULDER RUFFLES AND OFF-SHOULDER

effects are having such a success in winter collections that their further development is expected by many.

If sleeves and shoulder trimming are to become generalities dresses will have to offer some support for their added weight.

AT PRESENT CROSSED STRAPS, GLEECAN

style, and narrow flesh colored straps are the visible support for many backless dresses.

A double strip of strass or semi-precious stones running from the bodice top in front to the waistline in back is another way of defeating the law of gravity much resorted to by the French dressmakers.

Army's Huge Bombing Planes Show Their Stuff

These photographs, taken by the photographic section of the 88th observation squadron, army air corps, during maneuvers at Fort Sill, Okla., give a striking illustration of the power of Uncle Sam's giant new bombers. At the top is a giant army plane, 15,000 feet up, getting ready to drop a 2,000-pound bomb, indicated by the arrow. At the left is a closeup of one of the enormous bombs, with Major Willis Hale (left) of the staff of the air corps, and Lieutenant Charles H. Howard, commanding the bombing unit, standing beside it. At the right the soldiers are shown preparing to load a bomb on a plane. These bombs blasted holes in the ground 30 feet wide and 12 feet deep.

Department Translates 3,000,000 Words In Year

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington—Most treaties between nations are written in two or more languages and sometimes the misinterpretation of a word in translation is likely to cause a dispute which might lead to war or something.

So the linguistic experts in the Translating Bureau of the State Department have to know their stuff. Last year Emerson B. Christie, chief of the bureau, and his four technical assistants translated about 3,000,000 foreign words into English. Those words were written in a total of 21 languages.

TREATIES ARE ONLY A PART OF THE

work but the checking of parallel

NEVER TOO OLD

Washington, D. C.—Seventy, if you've never flown in an airplane and are that old, is the right time to start flying, if recent instances prove the rule. Two 75-year-old persons recently took their first flight in a plane. They were Mrs. M. M. McClure, 77, of East St. Louis, and Abram L. Fry, 71, of Glassboro, Pa.

DOUBLE WORK

"What's the matter with the shoes?" said the cobbler to Sandy when he brought them back. "Don't they fit?"

"Aye, mon," Sandy replied, "they fit well enough on me, but they were a wee bit too tight for my brother on the night shift."—Answers.

SOME RECORD

London—Fifty-five years on one job is a record, and fifty-five years of playing an organ in the Mansfield United Methodist Church is the record recently passed by Alderman D. H. Matthey, Justice of peace of Mansfield. He has never been late for a service.

KNOWS EVERYTHING

"The perfect translator has to know everything, so there isn't any 100 per cent translator, though our man Wilfred Stevens knows 28 languages. It takes a lot of technical knowledge when one goes to collect the radio laws of the whole world and translate them. Translators must know French, English, Latin, and many other languages. Translators are often highly technical. A translator has to know the subject well to avoid making a bull, which is very easy to do. All foreign documents are inadequate. So much has developed since the war, including radio and aviation terminology and many other scientific terms, it takes a lot of research to handle these words correctly."

EVERY LANGUAGE HAS GREAT DIFFICULTY

in its pronunciation and none is more than German," added Translator L. S. Perkins, a veteran linguist specializing in European tongues.

"The trouble is to collect the technical terms. In German oxygen becomes sour-stuff, nitrogen becomes mother-stuff, carbon becomes cold-stuff, and hydrogen is water-stuff."

JAPANESE MOST DIFFICULT

"From a general standpoint, Japanese might be considered the most difficult language. The Japanese have a lot of characters and you have to find them all used in the space of a few paragraphs."

You might think that these veteran translators, who have to have an understanding of international affairs, wide technical knowledge and a complete acquaintance with languages, would be paid commensurate salaries by the government. They aren't. Chief Christie gets $3300 a year and the others get from $1800 to $2800.

AN ATTEMPT IS BEING MADE TO HAVE them classified for salary purposes in the "professional and scientific" group. Just now they're under "clerical."

UNDERWATER SAFETY

London—R. H. Davis has perfected an invention which will enable escape from submarines far under the sea. The invention consists of a breathing bag which is supplied oxygen by a small cylinder of oxygen fixed below it. Poisonous carbonic acid gas of the exhaled breath is absorbed by a cartridge of soda lime. A special suit containing the breathing apparatus is donned in case of accident under the water. It has been tested at a great depth.

LUMBER DEALERS IN STATE WON'T GET LOWER RATES

Interstate Commerce Commission Reverses Findings of Examiner

BY RUBY A. BLACK
(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau)
Washington — Wisconsin lumber dealers will not receive the lower freight rates on their products shipped to central freight territory recommended by Examiner Alfred G. Hagerty, according to a decision just handed down by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In reversing the findings of Examiner Hagerty and dismissing the complaint of the Northern Hemlock and Hardwood Manufacturers' association, the Commission said:

"We think the record in this case tends to prove an improper relation as between rates applied to the transportation of lumber from points of origin in Wisconsin, and upper Michigan to points of destination in Indiana and Michigan and territory east thereof on one hand and from such points of origin to points of destination in Illinois and western trunk line territory on the other hand  but that it is not sufficient to enable us to make a definite finding to the effect that the rates complained of are unreasonable."

"The difficulty of making any definite finding in this case results from the fact that only the question of reasonableness is presented for determination by the complaints."

NOT ENOUGH EVIDENCE
"Evidence introduced in support of the allegation of unreasonableness is not sufficient to establish that the rates complained of are in excess of what should be regarded as the maximum of reasonableness, and because of the comparatively narrow limits within which the case was confined by the pleadings and briefs of the parties, those are the only rates we are free to prescribe."

"It is also true that since the hearing in this case we have issued a report in the Western Trunk Line Class Rates, in which we incorporated a distance scale and a scale of differentials for distance in western trunk line territory, to be used in determining maximum reasonable class rates from points of origin in a large part of Wisconsin and in upper Michigan to destinations in Illinois, Indiana, and a substantial portion of lower Michigan. The changes in class rates which will be required by our findings in that case are not shown in detail in the report, but sufficient appears to indicate that rates to destinations in Illinois will be somewhat increased while in many instances those applicable to destinations in Indiana and Michigan  will be reduced."

The Northern Hemlock and Hardwood Association, an unincorporated organization of Oshkosh, Wis., with plants and offices in Wisconsin and the upper peninsula of Michigan; the Birch Club of Chicago, and the Oshkosh Traffic Association, composed of manufacturers of building woodwork with factories and offices at Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, and Merrill, Wis., filed a brief with the Commission in October 1929, complaining of the rates in question as unjust and unreasonable.

The points of origin in Wisconsin included 933 shipping points located in 26 tariff groups, and 28 other points, including Green Bay, Sheboygan, Manitowish, Oconto, and Marinette, and other cities north of Milwaukee along the west bank of Lake Michigan, which are not placed in any group.

HIGHER RATES CLAIM
The principal argument of the complaining companies was that

REVOKE LICENSES OF 55 DRUNKEN DRIVERS

Fifty-five drunken drivers had their licenses revoked by the secretary of state in October according to a report received at the Appleton police department. Not one of these drivers was from Outagamie-co. There were two women among the 55, the report shows. Fond du Lac had six drunken drivers; Winnebago-co, 2; and Shawano-co, 1. The revocations ranged from three months to a year with three months predominating.

New York—Ralph E. Burr claims to be the only licensed office boy pilot in the United States. He recently passed the written examination and flight test for a license as a private pilot under the supervision of Inspector George D. Ream at the Curtiss Airport, Valley Stream.

they had great difficulty in marketing their products in central territory because the rates to central territory destinations from Wisconsin, considering both the distance and transportation conditions, were higher than to any other destination territory in the country. Rates from Wausau, Wis., as a representative point, to central territory are as much as 11.5 cents higher than for the same distance to western trunk line territory, the complaint stated.

The railroads on the other hand, asserted that the falling off of trade in central territory was due to economic conditions and not freight rates, adding that lumber shipments from Wisconsin to all territory had steadily declined in the last 10 years.

In his report Examiner Hagerty recommended lower rates on the Badger lumber, but did not propose definite rates because they must depend largely upon the decisions in the then pending Eastern class rate investigation and the Western-trunk-line class rates case. Examiner Hagerty said that it was evident that "Wisconsin lumber shippers are unable to enter central territory upon a freight rate basis as favorable in level as that available to shippers in other producing districts."

He agreed with the lumber dealers in finding the present origin group satisfactory but the destination groups, both irregular and too large. Through recommending lowering of the Wisconsin rates, he specifically stated that the present relationship between the various Badger groups should be maintained.

The Commission, in its decision, found the complainants' insistence upon the maintenance of origin groups and breaking up of destination groups somewhat inconsistent, since the size and shape of destination groups depends, somewhat, upon the size and shape of original groups. However, it adds that it feels that certain groupings in the destination territory are extremely irregular and should be changed.

In dismissing the complaint, the Commission recommended that the defending railroads should make changes in lumber rates covered by the complaint and in accordance with necessary changes under the eastern Line Case findings.

So Easy to Use! It Soothes, Tones Scalp,

Dandruff is unsightly! And what is worse, it steals life itself from the hair; makes it dull, brittle, scraggy; starts it to falling out; makes you gray before your time.

Why tolerate this? There's no use when you can get "Danderine" from any drugstore for just a few cents.

Danderine is no experiment. It has proven its merit by years of use and popularity. It dissolves the crust of dandruff in a hurry. The scalp is cleansed, soothed and toned by the first application. Excess oil is removed from the hair; its own

Clocks Change Faces To Maintain Modern Pace

Washington, D. C.—Clocks and watches are changing their faces to keep up with a civilization that whirls onward to dizzy speeds.

The United States, land of the split second, buys more and more clocks on which the second hand has grown from a silver to a full-sized pointer as large as the minute hand.

"Caps that used to punctuate the evening radio entertainment have disappeared because programs are now scheduled on the second," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

SPLITTING THE SECOND
"Trains listed to leave on the minute actually leave on the second. The world-wide reputation of an athlete may hang on a fraction of a second, a segment of time so small that a special time piece, the stop watch, had to be invented to record it."

"But with one European refinement of time and clocks, America does not conform."

"Trains on the continent can leave at 0:0 because the continental railroad schedule for most countries is now based on 24 hours instead of 12 hours a. m. and 12 hours p. m."

By international agreement a train that arrives at midnight, arrives at 24:00; also by agreement a train that leaves at midnight, leaves at 0:0. Some clocks in railroad stations show numerals 1 to 24; others have numerals 13 to 24 within the ring 1 to 12. England has not gone over to continental railroad time.

"Hours as recorded by modern timepieces are a relatively recent invention. Martin Luther would find our clocks decidedly queer; Napoleon's instinct for order would be gratified to know that the hour had at last been standardized at 60 seconds."

"In Paris, until 1819 the hour was a variable unit of time lengthening in summer time, shortening during the winter days. It was the Paris equivalent of our daylight saving system; 6 o'clock came when dawn arrived."

"In Nurnberg and parts of Central Europe another system was used down to 1809. At the time of the equinoxes day and night were divided into twelve hours equally; day time beginning at dawn, not midnight; night beginning at sundown, not noon. But as winter came and the day grew shorter the hours allotted to day were cut off so that, in December, night hours were numbered 1 to 18; day, 1 to 8. The reverse was true in summer. A season of the year was often referred to as the time when the day has 13 hours.

"Greenwich's master clock for the world has a dial with numbers from 1 to 24. It is located exactly on longitude 0 degrees, 0 minutes and 0 seconds. Here the maps of the world begin because all longitude is numbered east and west of Greenwich and all time bands are fixed with reference to the Greenwich master clock outside London. Eastern, Central, Mountain and Pacific time in the United States are adjusted with reference to the Greenwich master clock although the Naval Observatory at Washington gives out the official signals through Arlington wireless station."
